High winds ravage coast

Times News Services

Boats were driven aground off the California coast, backpackers and skiers in Oregon were warned of avalanche dangers and radio stations in Washington were knocked off the air as an early-winter storm punished the Pacific Coast with rain and snow.

In the Victoria area gusts up to 57 knots (106.2 kilometres) were reported at Gonzales and the combination of high winds and soggy ground felled trees like matchsticks. No storm-related injuries were reported.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said today the fallen trees caused power failures in a wide area ranging from Port Renfrew through to the Greater Victoria area and the Saanich Peninsula.

Twenty crew men worked from 1:30 a.m. Sunday to 5 a.m. today to restore power.

In California, winds were clocked at 150 kilometres an hour atop Mount Tamalpais, north of San Francisco, as the storm pushed east. One disc jockey looked from her fifth-floor window and watched garbage bags flying by. On the San Francisco Bay Bridge, drivers crept toward darkened homes as winds of 100 km/h shoved against their cars.

Christmas lights blinked off as the storm cut power to tens of thousands of homes in B.C., Washington, Oregon and California. Snow accumulations of more than 17 centimetres were reported in some parts of Oregon, while rains flooded basements in posh San Francisco suburbs.

"We're having a mess here," said police officer Joanne Blocker of Redwood City, Calif. "I wish I were home having a hot toddy."

Parts of major interstate highways from California through Oregon and Nevada were closed before the wintery blast weakened Sunday night. However, some storm activity was expected to linger through Christmas.

In the Manchester area east of Port Orchard, Wash., Puget Sound waves rode through front yards, witnesses said, and fishing boats were torn from their moorings and blown ashore. Highway 160 between Port Orchard and the Southworth ferry terminal was closed for a time when waves threw logs on the roadway.

Gale warnings were posted in Oregon as snow piled up. The U.S. Forest Service advised backpackers and skiers to beware of worsening avalanche conditions.

California's Monterey Peninsula was punished heavily, more by wind than rain. One woman in Prunedale reported that half the roof of her mobile home blew off and landed in a neighbor's corral.

Some flooding was reported in posh Marin County, while residents of Redding, near Sacramento, who ventured from their homes were greeted by the unusual sight of 20 centimetres of snow.

In Washington, gusts of 80 km/h were recorded at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport. Ten area radio stations were off the air for about 9½ hours when they lost power.

Phone calls could snag

Victorians planning to travel off the island over Christmas shouldn't encounter any major problems but those who want to contact friends and relatives in the east or overseas by phone may have some difficulty.

While it may be a bit damp, there should be no fog to hamper airlines or ferries.

Telephone calls to Ontario or Quebec may be a bit more difficult if a strike threatened by Bell Telephone employees goes ahead at midnight tonight.

The walkout could put a crimp in the plans of anyone trying to make overseas calls to Europe, except those that are dialled directly.

All long-distance direct dialled calls should go through normally.

All transportation companies expect to be operating normally on Tuesday.

Heavy fog was a problem in eastern Canada and some flights into Toronto today were cancelled although planes were able to take off from Toronto airport. There were no flights in or out of Ottawa.

B.C. ferries will have two vessels operating between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen on Christmas Day, meaning that 72 employees plus terminal staffs will have to work on the holiday.

The schedule out of both Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen is 7, 9 and 11 in the morning and 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 p.m.

Airwest Airlines will have one plane operating on Christmas Day. It will leave Victoria at 9:30 a.m. and 3:45 p.m. and Vancouver at 8:15 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.

In B.C. there will be 1,600 telephone employees working Christmas Day.

A B.C. Tel spokesman said the calls will be up about 15 per cent from last Christmas. He estimated there will be 1.2 million long-distance calls attempted from B.C. points during the day and about 300,000 would get through.

Snow? forget it

Greater Victoria residents may be dreaming about a white Christmas, but that's as far as it goes.

The forecast for Christmas Day is cloudy with occasional showers and a mild high of six degrees Celsius.

The rest of the week will be much the same — cloudy skies and rainy periods.

Christmas yes. Freedom no

TEHRAN (AP) — The Moslem militants holding 50 hostages in the U.S. Embassy promised them whatever they need to celebrate Christmas, but the captors and Ayatollah Khomeini said the only way the hostages will be freed is for President Carter to return the shah.

A spokesman for the militants who seized the U.S. Embassy 51 days ago said the hostages will receive "fruits, sweets and cookies and whatever else they need to celebrate their Christmas."

"We'll do it however they want it, whatever they usually do. But we don't intend keeping the hostages separately. If they want they can all be together."

But asked to comment on reports that some of the hostages might be freed soon, the spokesman said: "Our position remains that either the shah is returned for trial or the hostages are tried as spies."

The latest report came from French parliamentarian Brigitte Gros, who met with Khomeini and other officials in Iran and quoted them as saying three hostages will be freed within the next two or three days.

But Khomeini, in a message broadcast on Christmas Eve by Tehran Radio, said the only way the hostages will be released is for Carter to send back the shah.

"On the occasion of the festivities marking the birth of the Christian prophet, Jesus Christ, who through his holy and sacred words has condemned the world's oppressors, I congratulate all oppressed nations, Christian nations and our Christian countrymen in Iran," Khomeini said.

He said Carter should have bells tolled across the United

Troops guard pilgrims

BETHLEHEM (AP) — Christmas celebrations in the Holy Land opened today with a colorful procession from Jerusalem to the traditional site of Jesus' birth in Bethlehem.

Msgr. Giacomo Giuseppe Beltritti, the senior Roman Catholic clergyman here, led a motorcade of church officials and pilgrims from the walled city of old Jerusalem to Manger Square, outside the Church of the Nativity. The motorcade route was heavily guarded by Israeli troops on the alert against possible Arab terrorist attacks.

The procession was greeted by drum rolls, a fanfare of trumpets and the wail bagpipes from a dozen scout bands assembled in the square, which was decorated in pine boughs, pennants and colored lights. About 5,000 spectators lined up behind police barriers to witness the arrival of the procession.

The patriarch, wearing white and scarlet vestments, was greeted by Bethlehem Mayor Elias Freij and Israel's military governor of Bethlehem, Lt.-Col. Yosef Ziv. The three men marched between two rows of priests and monks who wore white, gold and crimson capes, and entered the basilica, where the patriarch will lead the pontifical high mass at midnight.

Green-bereted Israeli border police linked hands and formed a protective cordon as the three men entered the church, while troops watched over the proceedings from rooftop positions. Israeli army helicopters hovered above the town and two Phantom jet fighters made slow turns just below the cloud cover in what appeared to be a salute as the motorcade entered Bethlehem.

In his Christmas greeting, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said: "May the coming year be one of peace and understanding in our region and throughout the world."

Freij, watching from his office balcony as bustling workers added the final holiday touches to Manger Square, offered a Christmas

Liberals ahead by 16% in Carleton election poll

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals had a 16 per cent lead over the Progressive Conservatives in the early days of the Feb. 18 federal election campaign, according to a national poll by Carleton University's School of Journalism.

When asked how they would vote if the election were being held tomorrow, 38 per cent of those polled said they would vote Liberal, 22 per cent said Conservative, 11 per cent said New Democratic Party and 26 per cent were undecided.

The poll also showed that 44 per cent of voters considered Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau by far the most competent leader. NDP leader Ed Broadbent was voted second most competent at 14 per cent and Prime Minister Clark brought up the rear with 12 per cent. However, 30 per cent named another person or had no opinion.

The poll covered a sample of 1,191 people chosen to represent the national population and was conducted by telephone last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Carleton said the poll had a four per cent margin of error 19 out of 20 times. The poll was taken after the Conservative government presented its budget, after the government was defeated and after Trudeau announced he would stay on as leader.

The Carleton poll found that Canadian voters were not too impressed with the Conservative government's record.

Asked "do you think its performance has been good, so-so, or poor," 11 per cent said good, 39 per cent said so-so, 44 per cent said poor and six per cent had no opinion.

Those polled were also critical of the budget: 33 per cent said they thought it was good, 50 per cent said it was bad and 17 per cent had no opinion.

Asked "do you think there should be in an election at time time," 54 per cent said no, 40 per cent said yes and six per cent had no opinion.

Those polled were also strongly in favor of electing a majority government in February: 59 per cent said they feel a majority would be better; 24 per cent preferred a minority; nine per cent said "it depends" and eight per cent had no opinion.

Patient attacked, two held

Two men face charges of attempted murder after an attack on a patient in Victoria General Hospital.

Police said the two men were apparently visiting the unidentified patient around 6 p.m. Sunday when the incident occurred.

Police released no other details.

The two suspects were arrested later.

The two men are to appear in court charged with attempted murder and possession of an offensive weapon.

City house fire and fall result in two deaths

Two men died in Victoria Sunday, one in a fall from a fourth-floor balcony on which he was stringing Christmas lights, the other as the result of burns in a house fire.

Police identified the fall victim as Bror Gosta Bergh, 72, of 1955 Ashgroveth.

A spokesman said he was stringing Christmas lights under the eave of his balcony when he slipped and plunged to the ground.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Louis Garth Planes, 19, died in Victoria General Hospital after being burned in a fire that gutted the upstairs suite of a duplex at 855 Craigflower Road in Esquimalt early Sunday.

Glenn Charles Thomas, 22, found in the same apartment, is in fair condition in the Victoria General intensive care unit.

Esquimalt police constables Ian Hooey and Stuart Rhodes arrived on the scene to find the upper floor engulfed in flames.

Planes was found by the two officers in a hallway and carried out.

When they returned to the building, they were forced back by smoke and flames, but were successful on a second try and found Thomas on the kitchen floor.

The entire top floor was gutted and damage to the building is estimated at about $22,000.

Near Chemainus, a 77-year-old woman died in a house fire on an Indian reserve early Sunday.

Another woman was seriously injured. Police are withholding names.

As an expression of our thanks and good will, we are extending to all our friends and neighbours our very best wishes for a joyous and memorable Yuletide season.

THE OUTCASTS — by Ben Wicks

RJH's waiting list to ease

Victoria has received an early Christmas present in the form of assurances from the provincial government that the Jubilee hospital's waiting list can be reduced early next year, executive director Michael Butcher said on the weekend.

Butcher said a series of meetings between the hospital board and Health Minister Rafe Mair has resulted in an agreement that some long-term patients can be transferred from the Jubilee to other facilities.

"The increased number of beds for acute care will help to solve the problem. This is an important first step."

The key is to free the 114 beds designed for acute care that are currently occupied by long-term patients.

"The minister is helping us to find the solution and we are pleased with the co-operation we have received."

Transfers of patients will begin early in the new year to two nearby facilities.

There will be 50 beds available in a new long-term care ward that will open on the vacant top floor of the EMI.

In addition, the hospital will be authorized to transfer some patients to the Oak Bay Lodge where 150 new intermediate-care beds will become available.

Butcher said there is reason for optimism that the moves will reduce the waiting list, which has been growing steadily month-by-month.

"We are aware of the medical needs of those requiring extended care but the Jubilee was not designed to handle these cases. If we can free our beds for acute care we can attend to hundreds who need urgent attention."

He said an announcement on Dec. 8 that the Jubilee might have to stop booking any additional elective surgery, because of the long waiting list, was not designed to spark a confrontation with the government.

"He (Mair) has responded quickly to our requests."

Butcher said the Jubilee board told the minister there was little point in booking operations for seven or eight months from now when there is a strong possibility they would have to be delayed further because of more urgent cases.

message of hope for the 50 Americans held hostage by Iranian militants in Tehren.

Condemning the Nov. 4 hostage taking "in the strongest terms," Freij said the Iranians "have no right to hold them."

"It is against Christianity and against Islam."

Freij has been the only Palestinian leader to take a public stand against the Iranian action, which is supported by Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization and by other West Bank leaders.

Freij told a reporter that Israel's security net around Bethlehem was tighter than in previous years. However, he declined to speculate on the reason for the increased precautions.

Observers noted that Palestinian guerrillas have stepped up bomb attacks in Israel and the occupied West Bank since Israel and Egypt signed their peace treaty last March. There was speculation guerrillas might try to stage some sort of raid to spotlight their protests against the Israeli-Egyptian plan for Palestinian autonomy, which many Palestinians contend does not meet their demand for a homeland.

Israeli tourism officials expected more than 35,000 visitors in Bethlehem, Jerusalem and Nazareth, where special services were planned for the United Nations peacekeeping forces stationed in southern Lebanon.

States not for the "hostage spies," but for the benefit of "oppressed nations."

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said today bombs and other explosives were found in some parcels and gifts sent to the 50 hostages.

Ghotbzadeh urged them to take extreme care in screening the incoming gifts and said "enemies of the Islamic Republic."

The embassy captors allowed a three-metre Christmas tree from Seattle, Wash., and 90,000 Christmas cards to be delivered to the embassy Sunday by Los Angeles reporter Alex Paen.

Three U.S. clergymen arrived today in Tehran to conduct Christmas services for the hostages, and Tehran Radio said the three were invited because they always acted "in defence of the oppressed and against the aggression of imperialism."

The three are Rev. William Sloane Coffin, pastor at Manhattan's Riverside Church, Catholic Auxiliary Bishop Thomas Gumbleton of Detroit, and Rev. William Howard, a Baptist from Princeton University.

Before leaving New York, Coffin delivered a sermon criticizing Carter's call for UN economic sanctions against Iran, saying the strategy is "highly reminiscent of Lyndon Johnson's bombing of North Vietnam; it puts iron up the spines of the other side."

The three said they hope their visit will "begin a reconciliation."

The clergymen spoke to reporters at London's Heathrow airport where they stopped over two hours to catch a connecting flight.

Asked if they were planning to take an initiative aimed at winning the release of the hostages, Coffin told reporters:

"Private citizens cannot negotiate for governments. But when a government is having a hard time talking, it is up to private people to try to discuss the situation. Maybe two religious sides can get together and begin a reconcilation.

Howard said, "We have been asked to perform a service for all U.S. personnel at the embassy. I do not want to speculate on the precise meaning, but we have every intention of seeing them all.

"The American people are eager for a just and peaceful outcome. The indications are that the people in Iran want it too," he said. "We are taking with us a profound spirit of Christmas to our meetings."

Gumbleton said, "We want to encourage the U.S. people to be patient. We intend to listen carefully and find out exactly what is going on."

the weather

A frontal system continued eastward through the southern interior overnight accompanied by a little light snow. The next well organized Pacific front is not expected on the coast until after Christmas Day. In the meantime a moist southwesterly flow aloft will remain established over B.C. This will spell continued showers for the coast and a few flurries inland although Christmas Day will be a little drier over some areas. Temperatures will remain near or above normal.

Tissue like money in bank

VANCOUVER (CP) — About two dozen B.C. residents have opened bank accounts they hope will save their lives.

But it isn't money that they've deposited.

They've put their own tissues into this bank, the first of its kind in Canada, preparing for the day when their bodies become torn battlefields in a struggle with cancer.

Frozen in a stainless steel chest in the basement of Vancouver General Hospital are hundreds of plastic bags containing platelets — blood cells whose main function is to prevent bleeding.

The platelets have come from leukemia victims during times when their disease was dormant.

Should one of the patients relapse, they will be treated with x-rays and cell-killing drugs, which will wipe out not only the cancerous blood cells, but also normal cells, particularly platelets and infection-fighting white blood cells.

That's when the lifegiving withdrawal is made.

The frozen cells are thawed out and injected into a vein. The withdrawals continue until the patient's body recovers its ability to make the cells.

Without platelets, hemmorhage is likely, and often fatal.

Because the cells come from the patient's own body, there is no problem with rejection by the patient's immunological defence system. In the case where cells from outside donors are used, after a few weeks, resistance builds up so further infused platelets are quickly killed.

"We're on the brink of an explosion" in the use of frozen cells, says Dr. Noel Buskard, co-director of the cell separator unit at Vancouver General.

The next step, he says, expected in a couple of months, will be to start freezing white blood cells so patients who have undergone cancer treatments can have their infection-fighting ability restored.

Insult on top of injury, and a string of disasters

VERNON (CP) — Wayne and Myrne Phillips are angry with Vancouver General Hospital and Pacific Western Airlines for "intolerable treatment" after a freak accident partly blinded their son.

Keith, 10, was getting ready for bed Sept. 12 when a black light bulb exploded and sent glass into his left eye.

Keith was taken to hospital here where eye specialist Dr. John Graham closed the large cut but five days later he lost vision when his eye began to hemorrhage.

Dr. Graham said the eye was deteriorating and there was a possibility the retina was detached. He said Keith should go to Vancouver immediately so his eye could be examined with more sophisticated equipment and operated on again.

However, when the family tried to make reservations on Pacific Western, the only airline serving the Okanagan communties of Vernon, Penticton and Kelowna, they were told there were no seats available that day or the next and it was not possible to bump passengers for emergencies.

However, PWA spokesman Don Souter said in Vancouver this week that the airline often bumps passengers in emergency circumstances.

"It was very badly handled by the agent involved," Souter said. "If she had referred Mrs. Phillips to a supervisor, a passenger could have been phoned and asked to give up a seat for that flight.

"The agent responsible was either too busy or didn't use her brains. We regret the way it was handled."

The family drove to Vancouver, and when they arrived at 3 a.m. one morning they got lost.

"We drove up and down back alleys looking for a place to phone the hospital from," Phillips said.

"Keith was in agony. Myrne had to hold his head every time we hit a bump to help keep the pain down."

When they called the hospital for directions, the receptionist told them to come to the admitting desk in the morning.

"I tried to tell her it was an emergency, that our son was losing an eye, Phillips said. "She hung up on me."

Michelle Guadette, the hospital public relations officer who investigated the Phillips's complaint, said it was an unfortunate incident. She also said the receptionist does not remember handling the call.

"The family was obviously under a lot of tension and they should have been referred to the emergency ward or helped in some way," she said. "I feel for them because what happened to them was just rotten."

Keith underwent surgery four days after he was told to go to Vancouver but lost the eye.

Dr. Graham said, however, it was not the delay that prevented the eye from being saved because the injury was not the type aggravated by time.

But more grief was in store for the Phillips family when they took Keith Christmas shopping to cheer him after his release from hospital.

After several hours in the stores, they returned to find another vehicle had rolled into their car.

After sorting out that mess, someone broke into their car and stole all their Christmas presents and a new color television while they had lunch at a nearby restaurant.

The Phillips say they have received letters of apology from the airline and the hospital, but are not satisfied.

"We think Keith should get some kind of compensation for the pain and trouble he went through, Phillips said. "Apologies can't make up for that."

American pilot dies in crash

An electronic locating transmitter allowed resuce officials to locate an American single-engine plane hours after it slammed into a mountainside Friday night in northeastern B.C.

Pilot Ray Lowe of West Bend, Wis., lone occupant of the plane, died in the crash, about 95 kilometres southwest of Fort Nelson.

About 90 minutes after Lowe left Fort Nelson on the 3½-hour flight to Fort St. John, he radioed that his plane was icing up.

He was given permission to descend to 5,000 feet from 11,000 feet.

A search and rescue spokesman said Sunday that Lowe's plane crashed in mountainous terrain at about the 5,500-foot level. He said the ice [illegible] would have affected Lowe's instrument readings — readings the air traffic controller was relying on when Lowe asked for permission to descend.

The spokesman also said that the plane's electronic locating transmitter allowed a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox to pinpoint the crash site during a search Friday night.

The Buffalo returned to the area at first light, the spokesman said, and the wreckage was spotted.

Heavy turbulence prevented a rescue helicopter from landing at the crash site Saturday. The helicopter was able to land Sunday.

Merry Christmas!

'T is the day before Christmas, a reflective time,
The tree is all trimmed, we've bought fruit, cake and wine.
But before we retire for the year's celebrations,
We first must send out annual salutations.
Tradition demands that we make our first stop
Across the Atlantic — it's just a short hop —
To Buckingham Palace to offer our best
To the Queen and her family — Phil, Anne and the rest.
And while we're in London, we surely should greet
The lady ensconced in 10 Downing Street.
She's famous for issuing tough one-liners
But she faced down Rhodesia and even coal miners.
Other world figures deserve a call
We'll mention a few before they fall.
To Schmidt in West Germany, Giscard in France
Our very best wishes, and whilst there per chance,
We also should ask for a present for us:
That they'll boycott Iran without making a fuss.
Since Christmas time is the season of peace
Let the chimes ring out in the Middle East.
For Sadat and Begin — the Nobel prize they won
But let us remember their work's not yet done.

Now we'll circle back across the sea
Where our very first stop must surely be
At the mansion that's known as Rideau Hall
Where the Schreyers may stage a Ukrainian ball.
For our country's MPs, the future's not pleasant:
An election's not much of a Yuletide present.
Their idea of glad Christmas tidings
Is a promise from Santa they'll all keep their ridings.
So let Santa bring that to Crosbie, John,
To MOT chief Mazankowski, Don
To Baker, Walter and McGrath, Jim
To Sinclair Stevens et M. Jacques Flynn
To Allan McKinnon and Donald Munro,
To the NDP's Broadbent, the Liberals' Trudeau.

Back in Victoria, we'll provide extra servings
Of punch and plum pudding to the Henry Bell-Irvings.
In Government House they've now spent a year
And distinguished themselves, both far and near.
For Premier Bill Bennett, a card would be fine
The question is only: what name shall we sign?
If more is desired, then let's, to a man,
Just proffer blank cheques — each signed, "Campbell, Dan."
What's for the cabinet? Why, just let us look:
For Finance's Hugh Curtis, there's always a book:
We hope that the title won't make him queasy:
Each financier needs "Economics Made Easy."
For P. Sec. Evan Wolfe, Santa calls from afar,
"For him, the best present would be a small car."
Those seem easy directions, but then it is mused:
Did he mean a Carr, Emily, or just a car, used?
Newcomers to cabinet: we hope that we may Offer congratulations to Smith of Oak Bay,
To Rogers from Van. South, Heinrich from the north
And, of course, to Bill Ritchie, should he be the fourth.

We must ensure that the bells are rung
To say farewell to two mayors each named Young.
In Esquimalt there's Art, in Victoria, Mikey
Did each one leave for the good of his psyche?
With their departures, there were spots left to fill
Now Victoria has Tindall, and Esquimalt a Hill.
And in Oak Bay where fences are woven of tweed
Doug Watts pours a beaker of holiday mead.
Only in Saanich do things stay the same:
The voters told Mayor Mel he wasn't to blame
For the fusses and fights that have marked council life;
For Christmas, let's give him a little less strife.
Let's deck the halls with mistletoe
For our aldermen, all in a row.
For Ald. Robin Blencoe, a present most glorious
Would be a new council — Social Planning, Victoria's.
For a heritage advocate, Ald. Robert Wright
A well-preserved building would be a fine sight.
Ron McKenzie's considered the cultural czar
For him, let Victoria produce a true Star.
We must also remember our aldermen new Brewin, Cooper and Sinclair: best wishes to you.
In Saanich, we offer to Irene Block
The Secret Slush Fund, stashed away in a sock.
And could we forget that alderman dandy
With a true Yule name — that's Noel, Sandy.
A "Welcome Home" sign hangs over the door
For those who've returned to councils once more.
Downtown there's Frank Carson, in Saanich Ed Lum
And also Bob Cameron — back they've all come.

Our list of newsmakers could go on for days
With CRD, school board, and all MLAs.
But together they're not the heart of our town;
For that we must offer a most special crown
To each of our readers, citizens large and small
Who know that Victoria's the best place of all.
So to every Victorian, we say loud and clear
A very merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

by Nancy Griffin

STUART UNDERHILL

Christmas with Joe Dorset

Mr. Underhill, whose reminiscenses of past Christmases have appeared annually on this page for several years, retired as publisher of the Times last year.

I first encountered Joe Dorset while taking a shortcut to my favorite fishing stream which then ran clear and unsullied through a wooded ravine until it lost itself in a marsh on the southern shore of Burnaby Lake. The sound of an axe chopping drew me away from the trail that threaded through the salal. There was Joe, clearing the land he had just bought, two acres of it.

It was mostly salal and young alder, with here and there the blackened stump of what had been a bigger tree. The whole area had been stripped by loggers a generation before. Joe swung his axe rhythmically and knew just where to place his mattock under a root to get the best results. Without interrupting his work he grinned at me and said: "Hello, young fella."

Fast friends

He was a small man with a sunbrowned face and startling blue eyes. The skin around them crinkled when he laughed, which was often. His teeth and lips were brown too for he almost always had a wad of chewing tobacco tucked in his cheek. He could spit with deadly accuracy but sometimes a trickle of brown decorated the bristles on his chin.

By the time Joe started to build his one-room shack we were fast friends. I fetched and carried for him. Next came the chicken-house, a far larger building. Its occupants would be expected to lay down eggs and lives for him. I helped him nail down the shingles.

Joe accepted my efforts seriously and insisted on paying for them in dimes and quarters. I would have been content with the marvellous tales he spun about his boyhood on the farm in southern Ontario, from whence he graduated to construction camps in the north.

He cooked us starchy meals on his wood stove. We drank strong tea laced with condensed milk. Joe fortified his further with dollops from a whisky bottle. That didn't startle me. I knew that grown-ups needed strange medicines to keep them going.

Sometimes he would say: "Let's take off for awhile," and we would catch the trolley to New Westminster to see a baseball or lacrosse game.

Mother began to worry about her 10-year-old son's friendship with the stranger, whose praises he sang tirelessly. I was given a note to take to him, folded in Mother's fancy way. It invited him to supper.

"He won't come," I warned her. "Joe don't — oh, all right — doesn't like lahdidah parties you got to dress up for."

Joe surprised me by accepting the invitation instantly. He appeared at the rectory (my father was a Church of England clergyman) in a shiny but well-brushed blue serge suit with a white shirt and tie. His hair was slicked down with water and a nick on his chin bore witness to the freshness of his shave. He was subdued but the only thing that seemed really to trouble him was the cutlery, too dainty for his gnarled fists.

There was no end to his surprises. [illegible] Sunday mornings. What more natural than to ask him home to lunch with us afterwards?

I viewed the transformation with mixed feelings. I preferred Joe when he needed a shave, worked around his place in his undershirt, told me tales about Salt Jerk McGee who could spit 10 yards into a sparrow's eye and then demonstrated by spitting almost the same distance with equal precision.

Churches of the 1920s worried as much as churches do today about atteracting young people. One step in this direction at St. Alban's was to build a tennis court on the church grounds. The local youth self-consciously ignored it. The players who lobbed the ball back and forth during the long summer evenings were middle-aged stalwarts. They had a good time but Mother and Dad were left vaguely dissatisfied.

Then Joe sprang another surprise. He appeared one evening in white duck pants, carrying a tennis racquet. Mother was so glad to see new blood, though she would have preferred a younger vintage, that she clapped her hands and cried: "Good!"

She paired him with the pallid Miss Fitch, local grade five teacher. Joe played clumsily but with determination, she with prime persistence. They won the mixed doubles contest in the September tournament.

One cause of Joe's transformation undoubtedly was my mother. It was nothing amorous, I'm sure. Joe often warned me to steer clear of women. "You can't trust them," he sad. But he admired Mother, possibly because of her rosy-cheeked candor and her struggle to raise three children on Dad's meagre stipend.

Mother got interested in him too, seeing him as a stray sheep waiting to be washed and brought into the fold. It was she who persuaded him to be confirmed into the Church of England. On Sunday afternoon she sat with him rehearsing the catechism and other commitments to the faith. She glowed with pride as he knelt in his shiny blue suit among the young teenagers who were confirmed that spring by the bishop.

His habits changed subtly. He no longer spiked his tea with mysterious medicine. I was more likely to get a lecture on the dangers of drink. The wad of chewing tobacco was still in place but not when he came visiting and he spat less spectacularly than of yore.

Joe was becoming a bit of a bore and I sought his company less often. Nor did he appear at the rectory as much. Summer was over and with it the tennis. And he had taken to sitting in church with Miss Fitch and no longer came to our house for Sunday lunch.

Thus I was unaware of events that were building up to a dramatic explosion until one night Dad announced at dinner that things weren't going well for Joe Dorest.

"I called on him today," said Dad, meaning that his almost daily trudge through the parish had taken him to Joe's. "He looked terrible. I'm afraid he's hitting the bottle. His venture in the chicken business has been a dismal failure. He's heavily in debt and says he'll have to sell up."

"Oh dear," Mother fretted. She thought for a minute. "We must stand by him. We must make him understand that he has friends. I've already asked him to our Christmas dinner and Alice Fitch too, but it won't hurt to send a reminder."

(We always went to my grandmother's in Vancouver on Christmas Day but someone had given us a goose which Mother planned to cook the previous Saturday. That was the repast she referred to.)

Dad agreed, so next day I was dispatched with one of Mother's notes to the little shack in the bush. Joe wasn't home but he never locked the door so I left it on the wooden table where he had shared so many meals. It [illegible] with open cans and unwashed dishes. The chicken house was empty and silent.

The days flew by without a word from him. Saturday arrived and with it the problem of whether to set a place for Joe. Dad suggested sending me to find out his intentions but Mother shook her head.

"We'll set a place for him ayway," she decided. "If he comes he comes."

The unpredictable kitchen range behaved itself that day and the goose came out of the oven crisp-skinned and fragrant. What a shame Joe wasn't there to savor the moment. Miss Fitch was. With an apron over her party frock she had helped Mother and my big sister to prepare the dinner.

"I can't bear the sight of that empty place," Mother grumbled as we all sat down. "We'll clear it away if he hasn't come by the time Daddy's finished carving."

While Dad was whetting his knife in ritual preparation, we thought we heard a noise at the front door. We all listened but there was no further sound.

"Go and see if anyone's there, Stuart," Mother ordered.

I opened the door on the black night. I was about to close it again when I saw a darker shape huddled on the porch steps, its back toward me. I recognized Joe. He was talking to himself and from the way he shook his head he didn't like what he heard.

As I approached he turned an anguished face. I was used to Joe looking rough but never this bad. Even the dim light from the entry hall revealed cheeks that were unshaven, tobacco-stained and wet with tears. He had fastened a tie clumsily around his neck but had forgotten to attach a collar to his shirt. Whisky fumes arose from him along with other smells.

"Id's no good, Stuart," he said thickly. "I'm a ruined man. Ruined. And nobody gives the damn. See me down the drain. I sunnint of come. Goin' home ri' now."

He tried to get up. It was easy to push him down again so I could run and get Dad, who solved all problems.

Dad was making good progress with the goose when I burst into the dining-room with a graphic account of Joe's appearance. He hesistated, wondering whether to delegate the carving or to lay aside the knife and fork.

To everyone's surprise Miss Fitch stood up. "Please go on with the carving, Mr. Underhill. I know how to deal with the situation. My late father had an unfortunate weakness for the bottle. I think that's the trouble with Mr. Dorset right now."

When the door closed behind her we sat speechless until Mother, in the interest of good manners, prodded us into conversation. It was aimless because we were all straining to hear what was going on. We thought we heard the murmur of voices and some movement, but that was all.

Miss Fitch returned just as Mother was telling my sister to put her plate in the oven to keep warm. She was composed though for once there was a touch of pink in her cheeks.

Not so bad

"Mr. Dorset has had a lot of business worries lately," she said as she sat down and spread her napkin on her lap. "It's been preying on his mind. He's now asleep on the sofa in the drawing-room. Not the good one," she added hastily, looking at Mother. "I hope you don't mind, Mr. Underhill, but I took your heavy overcoat to spread over him."

Without awaiting Dad's comment she proceeded to give him a succinct account of Joe's financial difficulties.

"They're not nearly as bad as he imagines them to be," she said. "Nothing that can't be cured by the infusion of some small capital. That and good management. Fortunately I am in a position to provide both. My late par[illegible] well provided for and I feel, don't you, that when a lady enters a partnership she shouldn't do so empty-handed."

We were speechless with excitement and admiration. Miss Fitch had one more thing to say.

"Who knows? she said. "This time next year maybe you'll all be having a Christmas dinner with us. Mr. Dorset will do the carving."

Mother Teresa: 'Never turn your back on the poor'

By PHILIP CARAMAN

OSLO — This year's award of the Nobel Peace Prize to Mother Teresa of Calcutta was probably the most popular in the history of the award.

She caused a stir in Oslo before she left Calcutta by stating she did not want the usual banquet. Tea and biscuits was all she would have. One-hundred-and-fifty invitations were cancelled and the money allotted to the feast, some $6,000 was, at her wish, set aside for the poor and starving.

A few thought her ungracious. Young people in Norway clearly supported her decision. After she had been in Oslo only 24 hours and made herself known, almost everyone agreed she could have done nothing else.

She arrived in the cold afternoon darkness on Saturday, December 8, wearing sandals on her bare feet, a cotton habit and a borrowed overcoat, and emerged from the aircraft, a small, smiling, hunched figure, unperturbed by flashing cameras and television arc lights.

A large group of airfield mechanics in green overalls standing by the welcoming committee applauded her as she stepped on to the tarmac.

Everywhere she went during her four-day visit she was almost mobbed. For several days the papers had carried articles about her work. The public had read that her Missionaries of Charity were responsible for 150 homes for the dying and destitute, 90 of them in India, the rest scattered round the globe.

That, in Calcutta alone, her sister fed 7,000 people a day; that she had on hand 97 applications for new houses; that 35 nations were represented in her Order.

A recent foundation was at Yemen, where all those nursed by her sisters were Muslims. She had agreed to start a house there on condition that the Yemen government build a Catholic Church, the only Christian place of worship in the country.

A busy Sunday ended with an ecumenical service in the Lutheran cathedral. During the hour's service a huge crowd that could not find room waited in the cold to escort her with flaming torches up Karl Johann, the main street of Oslo, to a large parish hall, where again there was room only for a few. Somehow it did not matter.

It was an occasion to express the kind of joy Mother Teresa had spoken about in her television interview. Young, old and middle aged waved their torches and sang. The path of warm flames stretched half-a-mile through the town on a night several degrees below freezing.

Teenage couples, hugging in the cold at the entrances to shops, broke up and joined in the singing. Every now and again a drunken man would hail the marchers. The pace was fortunately brisk, set by Mother Teresa waving and smiling to all from her car at the head of the procession.

The fire brigade was at the terminus to extinguish the torches. From somewhere near the entrance to the hall came Mother Teresa's voice wishing all a happy Christmas.

Inside, a girls' choir sang its welcome and gave Mother Teresa a cheque for the money they had collected among themselves. Several other presentations followed. The Dean then announced the result of the cathedral collection that evening, nearly $10,000, a record for a church always generous in its contributions to worthy causes.

Then there was a still greater surprise. A voluntary collection made throughout Norway in support of the official prize and still open had already produced another $80,000. Only once before had a similar collection been taken and then by way of protest against the award of the Peace Prize to Henry Kissinger.

The actual Nobel award ceremony was something of an anti-climax. In the presence of King Olav and his family Mother Teresa made her formal speech of acceptance. Within a minute or two she had this gathering for the biggest event in the Norwegian year reciting the prayer of St. Francis of Assisi for peace.

She spoke without emotion on her favorite theme of the joy of helping those "naked of human dignity, those who were nobody to nobody, who had never known what it was to be loved." It seemed that the audience were hearing, in her quiet words, the voice of the starving, the lepers and the unloved.

She had helped 36,000 people found in the streets of Calcutta to die with dignity. She quoted the words of an old man she had found covered with maggots on a garbage heap. "I have lived like an animal," he told her, "but now I am dying like an angel."

She was not afraid to strike a phrase that would long be remembered in Norway. "The poorest nations," she told the ministers who were present, "are those who legalize abortion."

No one doubted that they had met a remarkable woman, fearless and full of love for the starving who would not eat a crust of bread for dread of being hungry again. "I want you to love the poor," she told this elite audience. "Never turn your back on the poor."

'The poorest nations are those who legalize abortion'

The icicle man cometh

russell baker

Hidden in a secret attic nook 250 miles from Manhattan lies a stash of the last authentic icicles left on the continent. All mine. Just thinking of them makes me cackle with delight. Henry Ford must feel this way when he thinks of the Ford Motor Company. John Warner when he thinks of Elizabeth Taylor. William Paley when he thinks of CBS.

I am an icicle man, born and bred. A Christmas tree without icicles? Intolerable. Better a hot dog without mustard. Better Starsky without Hutch. Better . . . .

Do I rave? Thinking of my cache of icicles often has that effect, because these, you see, are the real thing. Not your shabby plastic icicles that commerce now passes off on the gullible consumer, so flimsy, so light they tremble in every draft, float off the boughs and attach themselves by electrical attraction to women's hose and strong men's teeth.

Those are not icicles. The real icicles are hidden in my attic. They are heavy, metallic. When you place one on a pine branch, you can see the bough bend to the weight. Put 50 of them on a branch and it curves downward and moans a call for more sap to help it bear the burden.

These — the real icicles — are no longer on the market. Several years ago, someone discovered that people who eat them may become fatally ill. Production ceased. In their place came the flimsy, terrible, fake, plastic icicles of which the best that can be said is that they can be eaten without danger.

Since nobody at our house ever eats Christmas ornaments, I bought all the authentic icicles I could lay hands on before they vanished from the shelves. Certain persons groaned when they saw the boxes accumulating, for the fact is that not everybody likes icicles on the tree.

At our house certain people even hate icicles. They say icicles are vulgar, which is the whole point of icicles. Of course icicles are vulgar. Christmas trees are vulgar and in bad taste. Putting a chopped pine in the parlor is almost as tasteless as putting a plastic one in the parlor, and the reason we do it is that Christmas is the only holiday we have that authorizes even the fanciest people to revel in vulgarity and bad taste.

Latin peoples have pre-Lenten festivals and Germans have Fasching as excuses to wallow in coarse conduct. North Americans have Christmas. The tickle-and-slap permitted by the Latin and German revels are taboo in America (except at the Christmas office party), but otherwise it is open season on good taste.

Few things are more depressing at this season than those color-co-ordinated Christmas trees created by decorators to subdue the bawdy glitter and suggest that their clients are too refined to yield to Saturnalian orgy. A real Christmas tree should utter a brazen screech of unco-ordinated color proclaiming the joy of a brief wallow in pure tastelessness.

For this purpose icicles are indispensable. You can plaster the tree with red, green, yellow and purple ornaments; with breakable birds, Kris Kringles, houses and hula hoops, but without icicles — authentic icicles — sheathing the entire construction in macabre silvery glitter, what have you got? Just another Christmas tree.

At our house the icicle haters cheered when authentic icicles were banned, groaned when my foresight provided a hoard to see us to the end of the century and fought back. Years when the supervisor of decorations slipped away for vinous pleasure, they hurled whole clumps of icicles deep into three interiors, knotting them so hopelessly that the icicles couldn't be retrieved and stored for another year.

Some years, when taking down the tree without supervision, the work crew failed to remove all salvageable icicles, separate them carefully and put them back in their precious boxes. One year they threw out an entire tree completely crusted with priceless icicles because the master happened to be out of town during the dismantling.

The insolence of these rogues has reduced what was once a 25-year supply of icicles to a paltry dozen boxes. Not many, perhaps, but all mine. Tonight I shall go to their hiding place, bring them out, hand them to the icicle haters and stand over them with whip if necessary to make sure each icicle is placed with singular care at each spot on the tree needing the ultimate touch of vulgarity.

Later, if I can get a week to take down the tree myself, I can recover the whole cache for Christmas Future, even if it does mean two more weeks of picking pine needles out of my hands.

Victoria Press Christmas card winners

Seven-year-old Georgina's labor of love

Seven-year-old Georgina Hackett loves to draw and color and make things out of paper, according to her mother.

The young winner in the six- to eight-year-old category of the Victoria Press children's Christmas card contest is in Grade 2 at Torquay elementary school.

The colors in her card, a simple "Joyeux Noel" surrounded by a number of multicolored traditional Christmas figures, are bright and vivid. It appears today on the front page of the Times.

"It's just one of her big loves," says Mrs. Bronwyn Hackett of her daughter's drawing and coloring.

Her mother says Georgina is an energetic and "very independent little girl." She has a motor impairment condition which affects her legs and makes it difficult to get around.

But she manages very well, thank you. She rides three blocks to school from her home on Longacre Drive in Gordon Head on a special T-trike with five-year-old brother Graydon, who is in kindergarten at Torquay.

She can't take gym classes, so while her classmates are running and jumping Georgina — you guessed it — does more drawing and coloring.

With her $50 first prize, Mrs. Hackett says Georgina keeps telling Graydon she's going to take him to Vancouver, but she doesn't know how much money that is.

Little sister Mignon, aged two, is also the beneficiary of Georgina's art work, says Mrs. Hackett. Georgina makes all kinds of drawings and little books for her.

Victoria Press circulation manager Roy Comrie says the contest brought in a flood of entries, numbering several hundred. And judging from the winners, many came from outside the Victoria area.

The other winners in Georgina's category are both from up-Island, as are three other winners in other categories.

Darren Heise of Duncan took the $25 second prize for his rendition of the Christmas Eve scene, stockings hung by the chimney with care and a decorated tree in the corner. Pamela Taylor of Shawnigan Lake won third prize of $15 for her brightly colored Christmas tree design.

In the nine-to-11 age category, the winner was Huw Davies of Nanaimo with a snowy farm scene done in black and white while Morgan Bunka of Courtenay was second — she drew Santa Claus and Rudolph the Red-nosed reindeer — while Caroline Ridel of Victoria came third, with a black and white moonlit skating scene.

The 12-to-15 age class was dominated by the little drummer boy design by Leanne Romak of Victoria. David Frost's neat drawing of carol singers (he's from Chemainus) was second and Allison Mills of Victoria was third with a finely detailed color sketch of a blazing fireplace.

What's happened to Chrysler, the big three's trend setter?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — What Chrysler Corp. now must do, with its new-found help from Uncle Sam, is to turn back the clock and become what it was on, say, June 16, 1941.

That day, with Europe at war and pro-British sentiment bubbling up in the U.S., Life magazine ran a cover photo of Royal Navy gunner's mate Philip Gamester, happily gobbling a banana split in a U.S. ice cream parlor.

And splashed over page one of that yellowed old magazine is an advertisement for a motor firm then riding high on a reputation for imaginative, economical yet attractive cars. Chrysler, of course.

Or, in this case, it was Plymouth — then as now the third-ranked U.S. auto-maker's leading economy model.

"Folks, I've worked on 'em all," says the smiling mechanic pictured in the ad, in disarming, average-guy American slang. "Plymouth is finest!"

The advertisement goes on to claim that 1941 Plymouths had the most efficient engines, the finest new safety features and the lowest price of "the big three" U.S. Cars — and comfortable flash as well, with bright colors and wide seats.

In those days, Chrysler — now fighting for survival on promises it will produce, in effect, a 1981 version of that 1941 Plymouth — could make such claims without much fear of contradiction.

Now, it is a giant with holdings in Europe (15 per cent interest in Peugeot of France, for instance), Asia (15 per cent of Mitsubishi Motors), Africa, Australia and Latin America.

It has facilities of some kind in half the 50 U.S. states and interests that include financing and insurance companies, production of tanks and the manufacture of its own materials.

And it is being treated as a laughing stock.

Newspaper cartoons about Chrysler are common. One shows Cinderella racing at midnight toward her coach only to see it dissolve into a homely little vehicle labelled "Chrysler."

A couple of weeks ago, at a Senate hearing on car theft, a convicted car thief provoked uproarious laughter by commenting that he preferred stealing General Motors and Ford vehicles and adding: "I never had any use for Chrysler products."

Chrysler through the years built a reputation as an innovator, and a favorite — but now it's on the breadline.

All this would mystify Walter Chrysler.

He was born in Kansas in the late 19th century, the son of a railway engineer. He died in 1940. In between he created a classic U.S. success story.

Chrysler was a mechanical and financial genius.

He learned about cars by buying one, a 1908 Locomobile, and taking it apart; about the motor business by joining General Motors as a technician and rising to become a vice-president; about business competition by reviving the flagging Maxwell Motor Co. in the 1920s, much as board chairman Lee Iacocca is now trying to revive Chrysler.

In 1925, Chrysler started his own firm with what the company's public relations literature describes as "America's first medium-priced and high-styled automobile."

It had a high-compression power plant, four-wheel hydraulic brakes, aluminum pistons, full-pressure lubrication, air cleaner, oil filter, shock absorbers, a tubular front axle, and other features never before combined on a volume-produced car.

Chrysler through the years built a reputation as an innovator, and a popular favorite.

Within a year of its start in a crowded market, it had forced its way up among the top five U.S. sellers. Within four years it was in the top three.

The reason, presumably, was that Chrysler kept introducing things that were right for the times.

For example, it shifted car bodies forward over the front axle for a smoother ride, ending the era of back-set, coffin shaped cars recollected from old time gangster movies.

Chrysler had a 26-per-cent share of the U.S. car market in 1946, 16 per cent in 1968 — respectable in a field by then feeling the influence of foreign imports — and 14 per cent three years ago.

However, the most recent figures showed only a 9.9-per-cent share for the first 10 days of December.

So what went wrong?

That is the nub of the argument just thrashed out in Congress, before it voted a $3.5-billion financial aid package for Chrysler.

Critics say it is simple: Chrysler invested too much for too long in big, heavy luxury cars, assuming that the boom times and extravagent tastes of the 1950s and 1960s would continue indefinitely.

Middle East politics, soaring oil prices and the market shift toward fuel-efficient European and Japanese cars destroyed that assumption.

The critics also say Chrysler wasted fortunes trying to compete with General Motors in buying into all those foreign interests, and, alone among U.S. car makers, it produced cars on assumptions of what the market would bear instead of what dealers had ordered.

This produced huge backlogs of unsold vehicles.

Chrysler's defenders, from Treasury Secretary William Miller to small town car dealers, say those arguments are academic.

The real consideration, they say, is the enormous economic impact a Chrysler failure would have — hundreds of thousands unemployed, plus billions of dollars in additional welfare costs for the U.S. taxpayer.

Chrysler's position is that, although bad management was a factor in its decline, it has gone broke trying to meet new federal regulatory standards for improvement in gasoline efficiency, air pollution and safety standards.

Because the costs must be spread of over a much smaller number of cars produced, this adds far more to the price of a Chrysler product than to General Motors, Ford or popular foreign models.

However, for Chrysler the crucial thing is no longer whose arguments prevail.

The crucial thing is whether its upcoming cars will recapture the high regard the U.S. had for Chrysler products back in that dawn-of-war year that ended with the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Corporate families grow larger

OTTAWA (CP) — The country's biggest corporate families, including Desmarais, Bronfman and Black, are growing bigger and dominate the 10 largest groups of companies featured in Statistics Canada's latest directory of inter-corporate ownership.

The report, listing who owns what in Canadian business, gives a comprehensive picture of the network which, in one way or another, ties 50,000 firms with assets of more than $250,000 and sales of more than $500,000. There are more than 335,000 companies in Canada altogether.

The latest report, for the period ended July 1, also confirms the trend of increased corporate concentration resulting from a surge in takeovers during the last three years.

Among its findings:

— Canada's major business families control seven of the 10 largest groups of corporations.

— Montreal industrialist Paul Desmarais still controls the largest complex of companies, an increase to 195 from 175 three years ago.

— Peter and Edward Bronfman, through Edper Investments Ltd., now control the second-largest group of businesses in Canada, as a result of their takeover of Brascan Ltd. earlier this year.

— Galen Weston, chief of the fifth-ranked North American interests of the family bakery business created by his late father Garfield, controls more than 160 corporations, diversified in food, retailing and pulp and paper.

— The interests of Conrad Black, 35, rank sixth-largest in number, owing to his takeover of Argus Corp. Ltd. last year.

— The publishing-energy holdings of New Brunswick-based K. C. Irving and Toronto-based Kenneth R. Thomson rank seventh and eighth respectively. The Irving interests now control more than 140 corporations and the Thomson group enlarged its empire through the successful takeover of Hudson's Bay this spring.

— Charles and Edgar Bronfman, heirs to the Seagram distillery fortune, rank 11th in the director by number of companies.

— The federal government owns the fourth-largest family of 100 enterprises through its network of Crown corporations and subsidiary operations.

— Of non-family enterprises, Canadian Pacific Ltd. controls the largest number of companies in Canada, followed by the Rothschild group of Britain.

The directory is destined to become a best-seller, in spite of its $35 price tag, because it now gives a more current, detailed picture of the ties that link corporate Canada than ever before.

In the past, Statistics Canada has published its annual report three years after the year under review. Now, using a computer system and with one-third fewer staff, the agency can publish a review for the year in question.

From the report, companies, labor unions and others can find out ultimate corporate owners, whether domestic or foreign-controlled, as well as the links between, among and within families of companies.

For instance, one firm used the directory to discover its own parent, a U.S. company, says Peter Blitt, of the business finance division of Statistics Canada, which publishes Inter-corporate Ownership.

In addition, the directory shows there are 10,000 corporations which have links in the major corporate groupings. For instance, both the Desmarais and Edper-Bronfman groups are tied through their common interest in firms such as IAC Ltd. and Insmor Holdings Ltd.

The StatsCan directory is based on corporate files of non-confidential returns, as required under the Corporations and Labor Unions Returns Act.

A sister publication, which shows the financial performance of these same corporations is due next month.

First hole at Mt. Douglas par 3

I'm new here from the Prairies and I still can't believe how great it is to be able to play golf at Christmas. Can you provide some details on clubs in this area?

There are six 18-hole courses in the Capital Region, four nine-hole and two par-3.

The six major clubs are the Victoria Golf Club, the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club, the Uplands Golf Club, the Gorge Vale Golf Club, the Glen Meadows Golf Club and the Cedar Hill Municipal Golf Club.

The number of active golfers, not including juniors, in the six clubs is more than 4,000.

The Victoria Golf Club has the highest membership fee — an entrance fee of $2,000 — while Cedar Hill has the lowest at $216.

Membership costs vary between clubs because some have two distinct classes of members, active golfers and social members.

A social member is only entitled to clubhouse privileges, such as restaurant, bar, card room and lounge.

Here are some facts and figures on each club:

Victoria Golf Club, founded in 1893, is the oldest in the Pacific Northwest and the fifth oldest in Canada with a membership of 1,200, 650 of whom are active as opposed to social members.

The Uplands Golf Club was officially opened at its present location in 1922, but its members operated a nine-hole golf course at Macaulay Point prior to the turn of the century. It has 820 active golfers and 180 social members.

The Royal Colwood Club, founded in 1913, is one of only four clubs in Canada awarded the prefix Royal. It has 800 active golfers.

The Gorge Vale Golf Club has 645 active golfers.

The Glen Meadows Golf Club, founded in 1965, has 481 members from Victoria and district, while Cedar Hill has 800 members.

Happy swinging.

He's broken every regulation in the book

Who is that fly-by-night artist?

By PAUL MINVIELLE

A barnstorming pilot known by a variety of aliases has international law agencies and the air ministeries of several countries co-operating in an effort to locate and positively identify him.

Brian Thomson, a Transport Canada civil aviation inspector in Vancouver, told the Times the mystery pilot has eluded detection and capture for years.

Thomson listed only some of the dozens of international and domestic air regulations officials believe the fugitive flyer has violated:

—Flying without a pilot's licence. If the pilot does have a licence, officials are convinced it's invalid.

—Flying through cloud or in bad weather without instruments or an instrument rating.

—Low flight over residential areas.

—No multi-engine rating for the pilot.

—No night flying endorsement on the pilot's licence.

—Landing at night on unauthorized and unlit landing strips.

—Failure to file a flight plan when crossing international boundaries.

—Flying with overloaded and/or unsecured cargo.

—Creating a hazard by dropping objects while in flight.

—Flying above 10,000 feet without oxygen.

—Flying in controlled air space without clearance.

—Exceeding crew flight time limitations.

—Supersonic flight without permission.

—Flying an aircraft without a certificate of airworthiness.

—Failure to maintain log books.

—Penetration of Distant Early Warning (DEW) line without clearance from North American Air Defence (NORAD).

When first noticed years ago, the mystery flyer had no navigation or landing lights, but in recent years a single red light has been observed.

Incredibly, although the flyer has created consternation by buzzing houses and buildings, he has a crash-free record.

Thomson said the flyer is fairly regular in his appearances, and international aviation agencies and air forces will attempt this year to at least photograph him for identification.

If he's ever captured, Thomson said the usual procedure for a first offender will be followed — a warning will be issued.

Persistence in breaking the regulations could cost the flyer his licence or his aircraft could be seized.

Asked how he would be caught if he flies through the Vancouver-Victoria air control area, Thomson said aircraft from Comox could be called in.

The flyer is usually noticed Dec. 24, and he has been identified by citizens in different countries as Kris Kringle, Saint Nicholas, Pere Noel, Father Christmas and Santa Claus.

Could this bearded fellow tying up the phones be the phantom flyer?

Understaffed buildings open

The Parliament Buildings were open but understaffed today and a government employees choir sang Christmas carols before work and during lunch break.

Most government offices were open and employees on duty explained the empty desks by saying fellow workers used accumulated holidays or overtime to enjoy Christmas eve with their families.

But one employee said some others were given the day off by their bosses. A quick check at 9 a.m. showed the attorney-general and economic development ministries were closed.

John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees Union, threatened to take all 46,000 members off the job until Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe agreed Thursday that Christmas Eve is a regular working day.

Wolfed stated earlier that individual ministries could decide whether or not their employees would work.

Boat flip a hoax?

Provincial Emergency Program volunteers responded quickly Sunday afternoon when an upturned boat was reported in the Mill Bay area.

But it turns out the incident may have been a hoax.

A Pacific Rescue Coordination Centre spokesman said today the search revealed no sign of a boat.

He said the caller might have mistaken a black mooring buoy for an upturned boat.

Desk clerks bound in $400 robbery

A man carrying what appeared to be a shotgun held up two desk clerks at the Queen Victoria Inn early today and made off with about $400.

Police said the bandit used tape to bind their wrists before locking them in a storage room.

The two clerks, William Richmond and Bill Koski, were not hurt.

The holdup occurred about 5:30 a.m.

Police are also looking for a young man who walked into the Pacific 66 service station on Hillside and stole about $500 from the till.

In classic Grinch fashion, a thief or thieves entered the Salvation Army Centre, 757 Pandora, by breaking a front window and forcing entry to a locked office where they stole an estimated $1,000 in cash.

The theft was discovered early Sunday.

Salvation Army Captain William Merritt speculated this morning that the culprit was after the Sally Ann street collections.

"But we bank them every night," he said.

The thief managed to open the door of the concrete-encased safe by manipulating the dial and took cash from about 200 envelopes containing donations.

Police are also investigating the attempted rape of a 16-year-old girl early today.

The incident occurred about 1:20 a.m.

Christmas shopping: slow start, flying finish

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Christmas shopping started sluggishly this year but business boomed from the end of November, local retailers reported this week.

There were some new wrinkles this year. People were buying expensive items, ignoring the price tags and looking for high quality merchandise that will last.

All kinds of big-ticket items, from color televisions to dishwashers, apparently sold well in Victoria this Christmas.

Merchants have also boosted sales by buying more than the usual amount of advertising. Stores also held more sales, although the word is used pretty loosely these days.

Merchants usually wait until after the holiday rush for the clearance sales, but this year there were plenty of sales and special offers before Christmas.

Was it a sign that the Christmas retail business was in a slump this year?

According to the troops in the trenches, the sales clerks and floor walkers out there on the front lines, things were never better.

In an afternoon walking tour of downtown Victoria and some of the shopping malls in mid-week, the Times found the stores moderately busy.

But night shopping was a madhouse, apparently. On Monday night, it took Lyn Salyn of Victoria half an hour to find a parking spot — not downtown, but at Hillside Mall with its acres of blacktop.

"I came down Monday night and it was just awful. It was just incredible," she said.

Big items and small presents alike were moving fast. One store had a special on 20-inch Japanese color televisions, $100 off the regular price. They ordered a large number of them from Hitachi — there's a warehouse full downtown — and "we're selling lots," a salesman said.

At $600, people seem to have decided that the price is only going to go in one direction. With the yen rising, imported televisions and stereos will jump in price again, he said.

Simpsons-Sears has a white sale with "everyday low prices" — sheets and pillow cases, the kind of merchandise which usually goes on sale in January, but it's been moved up to the pre-Christmas period.

Expensive dishwashers are also on sale and moving rapidly. "Oh gosh, yes," was the salesman's reply when he was asked if many had been sold.

Cards and stationery sold fast. "You'd be absolutely amazed at the amount of merchandise that comes in and goes out of the store," said a clerk at Hallmark cards in Hillside.

In sporting goods, one sign of good business was a complete sellout almost everywhere of squash balls. "They make good stocking stuffers," said the girl at the Foot Locker, even at $2 apiece.

Eaton's is selling all suits and sports jackets in the Timothy E. line of young men's clothing at 25 per cent off, but "it's just a pre-Christmas sale," says one clerk.

They probably won't be offered at that price after the holidays, she said.

Manager Reg Hind says men's wear sales are below past years, although "it's picked up very strongly in women's fashions."

He says it's been a strong heavy-goods year, with expensive items selling well. Small appliances, china and the like are big sellers.

"People are buying more for quality in the product, looking for things that will last. We get no resistance on price for a better thing."

Janet Fast, office manager of the Consumers' Association of Canada in Vancouver, says the CAC has spotted the same trend.

"We've had a lot of people — more than usual — checking the product testing reports on Christmas items." They're looking more for quality," she said.

Are the stores actually holding more low-priced sales? Hind says yes.

The warm rainy weather last week washed out more than just roads and culverts.

"There's a lot of clearances, primarily because of the weather," says Hind.

Winter clothing and ski equipment just haven't been selling the way merchants anticipated, and rather than carry the stuff into their 1980 inventories, they are clearing it out now.

He wouldn't quote any figures, but Hind says Eaton's Christmas business is up this year by a two-digit percentage figure.

Zeller's manager, Leo Golden, says Christmas business is "very good — we have no complaints." Business has been brisk.

His store, too, has been holding plenty of sales. This week there was a clearance of toys. Is it a change in mass merchandising techniques?

"Not really, no," says Golden. Zeller's tries to hold a special sale every week and sends out newspaper flyers to advertise them.

Victoria shopping crowds like this didn't object to paying for quality this year

Merry Christmas to all - that's you!

bill walker

'Tis the night before Christmas,
Yes, it's me here again,
With a kind of a ditty
About good will to men.

It probably won't rhyme,
But that shouldn't matter;
The message's for real
If you don't mind the patter.

Many titles were won,
Many others just missed,
The winners were cheered,
The losers just hissed.

The Rocks finally clicked
And won the Mann Cup,
The Budgets the Pan-Am,
In Canada slipped up.

Wests took the nationals,
As did Home Lumber too,
While Ford and Pat Walter
Were rowing's top crew.

So on Wooster, the Bakers,
Hall, Somner, Munroe,
And Thompson, and Thomson,
And Smeltzer, heigh ho.

And Marshall, and Buckley,
Cadwallader, McCrea;
Boyd, Cool and Dillon,
You deserve a good day.

And Reid, Pollock and Lowden,
The Alexanders, by heck,
McNeil, Lynch and Webster,
Bell and Bill Marechek.

And on Stevenson, Holness, Eckhart, Wilson and Benn,
And Green, Konopacki,
Walton, Walker and then:

Up Phillips, and Smith,
And Bell, Underwood, Scott,
Kern, Patterson, Bate;
Many battles they fought.

While out at the track,
Keeling's sulkies rolled by,
With Hudon and Linton,
Their horses you buy!

Tonkin, Graham, McDole,
The Hollingsworths, Glen,
With Lundy and Bouvier
Were the other top men.

The flats they came later,
Wet weather came too,
The sport took a downer,
The fans were too few.

But on Harknett! On Davies!
And Bryant! And Green!
And Ulrich, Dunn, Filion,
Better days they had seen.

Todd, Popham tipped winners,
Reid told how it was,
But those who read Walker
Found the real Santa Claus.

Pro baseball tried hard,
The Mussels played well,
But a second straight year
The game didn't sell.

But 'twas never the fault
Of Leith, Dobson, or Bray,
Or Reid, Keyser, Cooper;
They all had their say.

As did Carson and Reynolds,
Peden, Merriman, Lang,
Lequesne, Crerar, Fedoruk,
Robertson, Underwood, Tang.

And up Hunter, and Thom,
DeMacedo, the Jawls,
And Donaldson, Brice,
Flynn, Mudrak, the Halls.

And Billsborough, Davies,
Penny, Carroll and Court,
And Morgan, and Rutledge,
And racing's Jack Short.

The Vikings came close,
Vikettes are just fine,
With Kathy and Ken
To keep them in line.

And roll on the Cougars,
To the top of the wall,
The Cup is in sight,
If you don't take a fall.

So up Jacobsen, Shupe,
And Rezansoff, Robinson,
Dawes, Eastman and Fuhr,
And Morrison, Robertson.

And Palmer and Feltrin,
McGill, Zinn, Pederson,
Smith, Jansch and Adams,
And Coldwell, Jack Anderson.

And on Gallaugher, Harvey,
And Skillings, and Foster,
And Walker, and Cummings,
And Wark, Moore and Oster.

On Humphrey, and Heap,
And Hooey, and Johnston,
And Sturroch, and Balloch,
Dagg, Abbott and Jonsson.

And Lindsay, and Mossop,
Iannarelli and Brown,
And Matheson, Kearns,
And Okell in his gown.

And Horrigan, Hawkes,
Clarke, Poole and Gutoski;
Think it won't rhyme?
Ask Mrs. Klinovsky!

And on English, and Moen,
And De Goede, and "Hook"
Spencer, Unwin and Hughes,
They're in soccer's big book.

And the Beasleys, the Coutts,
Moyes, Prior and hey!
There's Morgan and Bate.
And Turcotte, that's Ray.

And Burrows, and Yeamans,
And Jackson, De Lure,
The O'Connors, McKinty,
And Tom Levasseur.

And Lister, and French,
And Northup, and Knight,
And Ferguson, Waring,
Don Wakelyn, Bob Wright.

And Kaspick, and Stewart,
And Harper, Valleau,
And Andy, and Dot:
That's DeGirolamo

Then Campbell and Scott,
And Griffin, Phil Green,
The Barlows, the Blands, Yakubowich and Dean.

And Dillon, that's Nirmal,
And Dhillon, that's Charn,
And Jackson, that's Allan,
And Fergie, that's Arn.

On Midgley, and Rankin,
Smith, Vantreight, Mortel,
And Caudwell, and Haslam, And Halkett, Bob Bell.

Up Walstrom, and Kopac,
And Herb, Delesalle;
And Martin, that's Flora,
Our hall-of-fame gal.

And Severson, Groves,
And Browning, and Thame,
And Curtis, and Graas;
Curling's their game.

The gals have a place,
Perry does her thing well,
Like Moore, Todd and Bishop,
Lawson, Oster and Bell.

And I almost forgot
The trotters' gal Julie;
And Irene and her staff,
Who sweet talk the unruly.

And a greeting must go,
And I bother this crew,
The printers and all
Who get all this to you.

There are others too many,
Who deserve a note here,
But you get the idea,
Don't you my dear?

But now I am weary,
And must be away;
My reindeer are nervous,
It's nearly that day.

But you'll hear me exclaim,
Ere this night is through,
A Merry Christmas to all,
And by all — That's You!

'Iron Man' streak ends at 914 games

GARY UNGER
. . . it ends at 914

Times News Services

Hockey's longest consecutive-game streak came to an end Saturday in St. Louis when Garry Unger of Atlanta Flames suited up but did not play in a 7-3 victory over St. Louis Blues, ending Unger's "Iron Man" streak at a National Hockey League record 914 games.

Unger, 32, had played in every one of his teams' games, including 31 this season, since Feb. 24, 1968, when he was a member of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Unger suffered a torn shoulder muscle Dec. 9 at Winnipeg and had played sparingly since.

The extension of the streak caused unhappiness among some teammates this past week when Unger made brief appearances while the Flames' record was slipping to 13-14-4. In his games with the Flames this season, Unger has four goals and six assists and has not scored a goal in the last 11 games.

In the final minute of Saturday's game, Unger stood up on the Atlanta bench, looking as, though he was going to take at least one shift to keep the streak alive. But Atlanta coach Al MacNeil pulled Unger back to his seat on the bench by tugging on the centre's jersey.

In February 1976, Unger passed the previous Iron Man record of 630 games set by Andy Hebenton, who played nine complete 70-game seasons from 1955-56 through 1963-64 with New York Rangers and Boston Bruins.

Hebenton, a former Victoria resident, still ranks as one of hockey's all-time "Iron Men." Starting March 8, 1952 with Victoria Cougars of the old Pacific CoastLeague and continuing through to the 1966 season with Victoria Maple Leafs of the now-defunct Western (Professional) League, Hebenton played 15 consecutive seasons without missing a game, including playoffs. The streak extended to 1,062 games and ended Oct. 17, 1967, when Hebenton missed a Victoria game because of the death of his father.

MacNeil said he did not feel Unger was fit for the game.

"He can't even lift his arm up high," McNeil said of his decision to hold back Unger. "He's not going to play again until I think he's healthy. The team comes first."

Unger seemed to take the end of his streak in stride and indicated the coach had prepared him in advance.

"It's the coach's decision. We haven't been playing well lately. The coach felt the game was more important than the streak, and so do I," Unger said.

Oilers play hurt, tough in victory over Denver

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers had three key players on their injury list today, but a superlative Oiler defensive performance in a 13-7 victory Sunday left Denver Broncos feeling all the pain.

The Oiler defence, forced to stiffen after quarterback Dan Pastorini, running back Earl Campbell and wide receiver Ken Burrough were forced from the game with groin injuries, literally sacked up the National Football League's first-round victory in an emotional fourth quarter.

Houston dropped Denver quarterback Craig Morton six times for 47 yards in losses, and in the tension-packed fourth period backed the Broncos into a missed field goal try, intercepted a pass by Morton and batted down a pass in the end zone with 1:42 to play.

The victory advances the Oilers to Saturday's second round against American Football Conference Western Division champion San Diego Chargers.

"That last half defensively was an absolute superb effort," Oiler coach Bum Phillips said. "They were all over the ball and it seems like we were always able to come up with the big play."

Big plays by the Oiler defence became necessary when Campbell, the NFL's two-time rushing champion, left for good with 46 seconds to go in the first half. Campbell was injured when he scored on a three-yard touchdown run that gave the Oilers a 10-7 halftime lead.

Houston scored on its first possession of the game on Toni Fritsch's 31-yard field goal and Denver took the lead on Morton's seven-yard pass to Dave Preston prior to Campbell's game-winner.

Fritsch kicked a 20-yarder with 4:18 left in the game for the final points.

Campbell, who finished the game with 50 yards on 16 carries and Pastorini, who hit eight of 18 passes for 149 yards, are questionable for Saturday's game.

Burrough was hurt in the first half and did not play after halftime.

Early in the third quarter Pastorini stumbled and fell to the turf with a groin strain and he was finished for the day.

Gifford Nielsen replaced Pastorini, Rob Carpenter came on for Campbell and the Oiler defence went wild.

Denver's Bob Swenson intercepted a Nielsen pass early in the fourth quarter at the Houston 26. But consecutive sacks by middle guard CurleyCulp and defensive end Ken Kennard forced Fred Steinfort to attempt a 50-yard field goal that was wide.

Houston linebacker Gregg Bingham intercepted a Morton pass with 7:53 left in the game and returned it 15 yards to the Denver 20, setting up Fritsch's final field goal.

Oiler safety Vernon Perry produced Houston's last big play with 1:42 left in the game when he batted away a pass in the end zone on fourth down.

"I didn't think they could beat us without Campbell and Pastorini," Denver coach Red Miller said. "We just didn't score the points when we needed them."

Miller said the turning point in the game was Bingham's interception, but Oiler defensive end Elvin Bethea said it came earlier when Steinfort missed his field goal try.

"We knew we had them when he missed that field goal," Bethea said. "We knew what we had to do and we did it. We had to push Morton out of the pocket. He had us off balance early by calling a quick count. We adjusted to that but they kept on calling the same stuff."

Violence in the Garden but happiness elsewhere

By The Canadian Press

The happiness in Philadelphia, Chicago and Quebec City on Sunday night just about offset the ugliness at New York's Madison Square Garden — just about.

Philadelphia Flyers extended their record National Hockey League unbeaten streak to 30 games with a 4-2 triumph over Hartford. Chicago Black Hawks, hockey's worst offensive team, poured eight goals into New York Islanders' net while Tony Esposito registered his league-leading fifth shutout of the season. Montreal Canadiens, who broke a six-game losing streak — it's longest since 1940 — on Saturday by defeating Vancouver Canucks 4-2, blasted Toronto Maple Leafs 8-4 and Quebec Nordiques, which is 9-0-1 on Sundays, topped Buffalo Sabres 3-1.

While those winners celebrated, Boston Bruins ruined the night for Ranger fans by beating New York 4-3. Then several fans tried to ruin the evening for everyone else.

"Al Secord suckered Ulf Nilsson and the referee did nothing about it," said New York's John Davidson, who had surrendered three goals in the final period as the Rangers blew a 3-1 lead. "Wensink stuck his nose in my business; that's his role in hockey, anyway. That's all he can do."

While Davidson and Wensink were discussing earlier proceedings, Secord and New York's Frank Beaton began fighting in the corner. All players from both teams were on the ice and one of them, Boston's Stan Jonathan, was punched in the face by a Madison Square Garden fan.

Jonathan raised his stick and the fan grabbed it and turned it on the player. Terry O'Reilly then jumped over the boards and wrestled with the fan. Several of the Boston players followed O'Reilly into the stands and got about eight rows deep before being met by a surge of fans.

Garden and New York City police broke up the brawl and four fans were given summonses. Before the security people could separate the players and patrons, Secord was seen beating a fan with a shoe.

"I went in the stands because somebody who had no right to do it punched Stanley," said O'Reilly. "When Stanley put his stick up, the fan took it away and hit Stanley with it.

"It's none of the fans' business. We don't interfere with them if they leave use alone. When I got in there it was pretty bad. I regret it but I don't think we had a choice."

Bruin coach Fred Creighton blamed Davidson, who took off for the Boston players at game's end, for inciting the crowd.

"What was Davidson doing in our end of the ice?" asked Creighton. "Did he make the wrong turn out? If he's mad at Wensink, Secord and Jonathan, there are three more games between us. No one is going to run away."

Others were blaming referee Greg Madill for letting matters get out of hand.

"We have been told by Mr. (NHL president John) Ziegler not to talk about this," said Ranger's president William Jennings, "but you can quote me: the referee caused this whole problem."

"Madill let everything go all night," added Rangers assistant coach Mike Nykoluk. "We'll have to get the film out and give it to the league in order to stop this stuff."

During the game, New York built a 3-1 lead on goals by Mario Marois, Don Murdoch and Anders Hedberg before O'Reilly, Bobby Lalonde and Jonathan beat Davidson in the third session. Rick Middleton scored the other Boston goal and netminder Gerry Cheevers stopped Phil Esposito on a breakaway with six seconds to go to preserve the win.

Flyers 4 Whalers 2

Brian Propp scored twice as the Flyers continued to ravage the NHL. Philadelphia set a league mark with 29 straight games without a defeat by beating Boston 5-2 Saturday. "The game didn't have near the importance of yesterday's," said Philadelphia coach Pat Quinn, "so you can expect sort of a letdown. You can't expect athletes to stay at an emotional peak forever."

Black Hawks 8 Islanders 0

Chicago's weak attack came to life as Grant Mulvey scored three times, Terry Ruskowski had a goal and three assists and Bob Murray collected four assists. The Hawks had scored only 85 goals in 33 games before Sunday. "We put it together tonight and made a real good hockey team look bad," Mulvey said.

Canadiens 8 Maple Leafs 4

Montreal scored four goals in a 3:44 span of the first period, with Serge Savard scoring once and setting up two tallies. Yvan Lambert scored twice as the Canadiens won their second straight home game after losing six straight. "That's only two games," said defenceman Larry Robinson. "We still made some mistakes and we've got to get our conditioning back. But it's a start."

Quebec's scheduled Saturday game with the North Stars in Bloomington, Minn., was postponed when the Nordiques' plane could not land because of fog.

Dent takes tennis title

SYDNEY (Reuter) — Australian Phil Dent turned in one of the finest performances of his career to win the men's singles final at the $150,000 New South Wales open tennis championships Sunday.

Dent completely outplayed Hank Pfister, of the U.S., winning 6-4, 6-4, 7-5.

In the women's final, Czechoslovak teenager Hana Mandlikova, 17, beat 16-year-old Bettina Bunge of the U.S. 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

Eagles need rally to get by Bears

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Eagles ended 19 years of frustration when they gave the home fans a National Football League playoff game victory.

The Eagles beat Chicago Bears 27-17 Sunday on a 63-yard touchdown pass-run play from quarterback Ron Jaworski to substitute running back Billy Campfield in the fourth period.

Now, it's on to Tampa for a second-round game against Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the drive for the National Conference title and a place in the Jan. 20 Super Bowl against the American Conference survivor. Tampa Bay had a bye as the NFC Central Division winner, while the Eagles had to play the Bears in a game between two wild-card teams.

The Eagles' last appearance in a playoff game at home was in 1960, when they beat Green Bay Packers, 17-14, to win the NFL title. There were only two divisions in those days, nothing like the six-division, drawn-out, post-season action of today.

The Eastern runners-up Eagles took a 7-0 lead on the Central Division Bears four minutes and two seconds into the game on a 17-yard scoring pass from Jaworski to wide receiver Harold Carmichael. Chicago tied it on a two-yard run by Walter Payton, and led at halftime 17-10 on a one-yard Payton TD and a 30-yard Bob Thomas field goal. The first of Tony Franklin's two field goals, a 29-yarder, was the other Philadelphia first-half score.

The second half was a testimonial to the Eagles' defence, and the confidence of coach Dick Vermeil in Jaworski, the quarterback who keyed an 11-5 regular season and Sunday's playoff triumph.

Chicago didn't score in the second half, thanks to a superb defensive effort by the Eagles, rookie linebacker Jerry Robinson, who had a game-high 10 tackles. Linebackers Reggie Wilkes, Frank LeMaster and John Runting, and cornerbacks Bobby Howard and Herman Edwards frustrated the Chicago offence, Howard and Edwards made game-saving interceptions.

After their first touchdown, the Eagles had trouble penetrating the equally tough Chicago defence. The crowd of 69,397 booed Jaworski. They screamed for backup quarterback John Walton. Vermeil and Jaworski heard, but neither paid any attention.

Jaworski remained in charge of the offence and threw two more touchdown passes, one to Carmichael for 29 yards, and that game winner to Campfield. He also moved the team into position for Franklin's second field goal — 34 yards.

"I know the Philadelphia fans are not patient," said Jaworski. "Personally I can't understand it. But it (the boos) just fires up the guys on the team. It's a great motivator for myself."

Jaworski tried to explain that things happen on offence over which he has no control, such as dropped passes, tipped balls, penalties etc. He said he can't let things like that upset him.

"Ron executed very well today," said Vermeil, who subscribes to the theory that if you listen to the fans you wind up sitting with them.

Bunting and Wilkes spoke for the defence.

Bears' coach Neill Armstrong said that, on a scale of 10, his team gave the maximum effort, but executed at about 7½. He was upset at two calls by the officials. One was a back-in-motion penalty that nullified an 84-yard run to the Eagles' one by Payton, and the other one he felt may have been called on Philadelphia's winning touchdown play.

On Campfield's 63-yard touchdown, Armstrong felt one of his linebackers was illegally picked off, intentionally or otherwise.

Gregg waits to learn what Hayman will do

CINCINNATI (AP) — Forrest Gregg says he doesn't know whether he will be released from his contract with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League to return to the National League.

Gregg, former coach of the Cleveland Browns, has been reported as the top candidate to replace Homer Rice as coach of Cincinnati Bengals.

"I have asked the Argonauts to release me from my contract so I can puruse head coaching opportunities in the National Football League," Gregg said in a telephone interview from Toronto Sunday. "I don't know what is going to happen."

Lew Haymen, president of the Argonauts, said earlier he will do everything he can to convince Gregg to remain with the Argos. Gregg has two years remaining on his CFL contract.

"I don't know what it would take to make me want to stay here. And I don't know what he (Hayman) will do," Gregg said.

Gregg refused to speak about specific opportunities in the NFL.

Cats can do without rest

Coach Jack Shupe's remark was made with tongue in cheek, but he does not think Victoria Cougars "appreciate" rest.

"I haven't noticed any benefits," said Shupe after the Cougars wound up a tough, nine-game road trip in Portland by losing a 7-3 Western Hockey League decision Saturday.

Still, the Cougars earned some time off to celebrate Christmas at home before they resume activity with Thursday's Memorial Arena matchup against New Westminster Bruins.

Cougars won five and lost four and Shupe was reasonably pleased with the travelling success — "until the last."

That's when the Victoria players enjoyed their greatest rest in two weeks but may have not been at their best.

They had a two-day layoff before beating the Bighorns 6-4 in Billings last Wednesday. They didn't skate Thursday or Friday, simply because Shupe was unable to locate any ice for practice in Portland.

In both games, Shupe feels Cougars did not play as well as they are able.

Against the surging Hawks, Cougars were slow to get off the blocks. It was 3-0, advantage Portland, before the 10-minute mark. It was 4-0 just past the halfway mark in the game before Cougars came alive on goals by Brad Palmer and Bob Jansch.

The Winter Hawks, who set a club record with their ninth straight victory to move to within four points of the Western Division-leading Cougars, also benefited from Victoria penalties.

Winter Hawks became the first club to sting Victoria for three power-play goals this season. Portland also scored once, by Florent Robidoux, while shorthanded.

Robidoux' goal made it 7-2 late in the third and Barry Pederson, with his 28th of the year, concluded scoring 32 seconds later.

Both teams were assessed 10 minors and one major.

Cougars, out-shot 34-21 in the first two periods, dominated the third with a 23-10 edge in shooting but Darrell May played a strong game in the Portland goal.

Ed Cooper and Brian Shaw each scored two for the Hawks before 5,342 fans.

In the only other game played at the weekend, Medicine Hat Tigers rallied from a two-goal deficit in the third period to salvage a 5-5 overtime tie with Saskatoon Blades.

Ken Solheim scored twice for the Tigers, who were outshot 54-42.

Medicine Hat took 11 of 15 minor penalties, three of six majors, two of three misconducts and and two of three game misconducts.

Thursday's visit by the Bruins will be New Westminster's first to Victoria since the return of their so-called "Black Aces" — the players suspended until Dec. 1 by a court ruling.

Cougars then will have one day to prepare for Saturday's visit by the Czechoslovakian national junior team.

Suns' surge burns Bucks

By Associated Press

Milwaukee Bucks seemed to have everything in their favor Sunday night, but Alvan Adams and Paul Westphal wouldn't let that stop Phoenix Suns.

The Suns were in Milwaukee for their third National Basketball Association game in as many nights in as many different cities. Walter Davis, their all-star forward, was on the bench with a sprained ankle, and the well-rested Bucks were leading 95-82 with 7:36 remaining to play.

But Adams, who sank 10 of 12 shots and finished with 24 points, scored on a steal and drive to cap a run of 13 successive Phoenix points as the Suns tied at 95-95 with 4:15 left. Westphal then scored seven of his 26 points in the last 1:51 as the Suns won their seventh successive game, 106-103.

In other games Sunday, Los Angeles Lakers beat Seattle SuperSonics 102-97, New York Knicks defeated Portland Trail Blazers 111-103 and San Diego Clippers downed Utah Jazz 124-118.

"We just started hitting," Adams shrugged. "We were 11 for 21 in the fourth quarter. We missed our first five or six, so we must have been 11 for 15 after that.

"But to tell you the truth, I never realized we were down by 13," he said. "It seemed like we were just three or four baskets behind."

"I didn't know we were 13 behind, either," Westphal chuckled. "That shows you how perceptive we are. If we had known we were 13 behind, we might have given up."

It was no laughing matter to Bucks' coach Don Nelson, whose team seemingly had shaken a slump by having won its previous two games.

"I thought we were back (from the slump), I really did," Nelson said. "But the key to the whole game was turnovers. We did not protect the basketball."

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points and grabbed 14 rebounds, leading Los Angeles to victory over Seattle and into a virtual tie with the SuperSonics for first place in the Pacific Division.

Toronto fog delays Petes

TORONTO (CP) — Peterborough Petes, strengthened by seven players from other Ontario Major Junior Hockey League teams, were scheduled to leave Toronto today to represent Canada in the world junior hockey championships, starting Thursday in Helsinki, after being fogged in at Toronto International Airport on Sunday.

"Canada will be well represented in the championships," said David Branch, commissioner of the OMJHL. "Peterborough is the defending Memorial Cup champion, is presently in first place over-all in the league and with the addition of seven players will be competitive."

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry O'Brien, commissioner of the National Basketball Association, has stayed the 10-day suspension he had imposed on forward George McGinnis of Denver Nuggets, pending a hearing on Thursday.

The announcement came a day after O'Brien had suspended McGinnis without pay for 10 days for "intentionally running into and knocking to the floor" referee Jess Kersey during a game at Seattle.

Under terms of the agreement between the league and the NBA Players' Association, McGinnis exercised his right to request a formal hearing before the commissioner. He says the collision was unintentional.

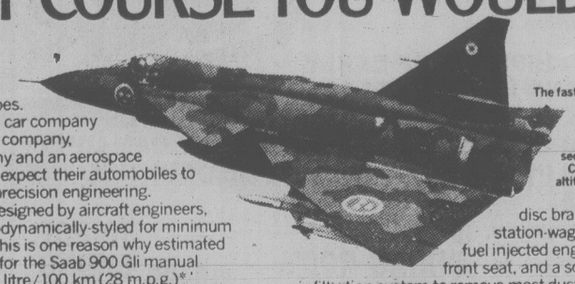
IF IBM, BOEING AND NASA BUILT A CAR WOULD YOU BUY IT? OF COURSE YOU WOULD.



The fastest Saab ever built – the Saab Viggen. It takes off in 1300 ft. Reaches supersonic speeds 60 seconds after take-off. Climbs to a 32,810 ft. altitude in 100 seconds. Flies at Mach 2.

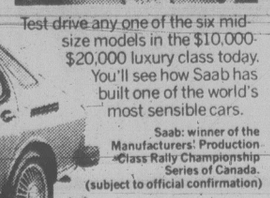
They don't.
But Saab does.
And when a car company is also a computer company, an aircraft company and an aerospace company, you can expect their automobiles to be designed with precision engineering.

Originally designed by aircraft engineers, Saab cars are aerodynamically styled for minimum wind resistance. This is one reason why estimated fuel consumption for the Saab 900 Gli manual four-speed is 10.1 litre/100 km (28 m.p.g.)*

Saab has long been aware of the fact that big on the outside does not necessarily mean roomier and more comfortable on the inside. Although compact in outward appearance, the Saab 900 has been classified by recent U.S. EPA ratings as a mid-size car in the same category as Buick Century and Regal, Cadillac Eldorado, Ford LTD II, Lincoln Continental Mark V and Pontiac Grand Prix.

And where are North American automotive manufacturers headed for in the future? Here are some standard Saab features that might give you a pretty good indication: rack and pinion steering, front-wheel drive, four-wheel power-assist dual-circuit disc brakes, 5th-door station-wagon convenience, fuel injected engines, a heated front seat, and a sophisticated air-filtration system to remove most dust and pollen from the passenger compartment.

Compared to a Saab Viggen, a Saab 900 is much more comfortable, quieter and uses a lot less fuel. Other than that, the two have quite a bit in common. Just ask any Datasaab computer.



Just where does Datasaab stand in the computer industry? In at least one segment, right on top. A recent independent survey of banks showed users of Datasaab teller terminals to be consistently more satisfied than users of IBM, Bunker Ramo, TRW and Olivetti equipment.

Test drive any one of the six mid-size models in the $10,000-$20,000 luxury class today. You'll see how Saab has built one of the world's most sensible cars.

Saab: winner of the Manufacturers' Production Class Rally Championship Series of Canada. (subject to official confirmation)

*Fuel consumption rating based upon approved Transport Canada test methods. Your fuel consumption may vary depending upon road, traffic and vehicle conditions.

Victoria's Ed Murray kicks two field goals in losing Tulane cause

Huskies upset Longhorns

By The Associated Press

Penn State beat Tulane 9-6 in Saturday's Liberty Bowl thanks to a play sent in by telephone from the press box. Washington's phone lines were blown out by strong winds, but the Huskies managed to beat Texas 14-7 in the Sun Bowl anyway.

The key play in Penn State's victory was a 39-yard option pass from Joel Coles, a fourth-string tailback, to Tom Donovan at the 11-yard line. That set up Herb Menhardt's 20-yard field goal with 18 seconds remaining that gave the unranked Nittany Lions the victory over No. 15 Tulane in U.S. college football's Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tenn.

"Bob Phillips called the play from the press box," said Penn State coach Joe Paterno, giving credit to his quarterback coach. "He called almost all of the ball game and did a good job."

Washington coach Don James didn't have such an option, since winds gusting to 50 kilometres an hour in El Paso, Tex., knocked out communications between the sideline and the press box at the Sun Bowl.

"We followed our game plan as well as we could considering we had no telephone," said James. "We finally had to bring our coordinators down onto the field. We could have lost the game because of that."

But Washington, ranked 13th, converted two Texas fumbles into touchdowns and came up with a strong defensive effort to upset the 11th-ranked Longhorns. Strong safety Greg Grimes made a goalline tackle to stop Texas from scoring on its first drive and later came up with a fumble recovery that led to one of Washington's scores.

Louisiana State defeated Wake Forest 34-10 in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla. The weekend's bowl action began Friday night in San Diego, where Indiana upset previously unbeaten Brigham Young 38-37 in the Holiday Bowl.

Menhardt's winning field goal for Penn State was his third of the game. He also connected from 33 and 27 yards in the second period.

Ed Murray kicked two 26-yard field goals for Tulane in the final period, the second one tying the score with 2:40 to play. But Penn State drove from its own 20 to the Tulane 3 to set up the winning kick.

(Murray is from Victoria).

The big play was the option pass, which came on a third-and-two situation at midfield with 58 seconds remaining. Coles took a pitchout and fired to Donovan, who was wide open.

Tulane quarterback Roch Hontas, who completed 21 of 39 pass attempts for 210 yards, was named the game's most valuable player. But he was sacked five times, four by Larry Kubin, leaving the Green Wave with a minus-eight rushing yardage.

The winds at the Sun Bowl were so strong that camera equipment set up atop the press box was blown into the stands, injuring several spectators.

In the second period, Washington noseguard Stafford Mays recovered a Texas fumble at the Longhorns' 42 and Washington scored seven plays later. Tom Flick firing an 18-yard pass to Paul Skanski. Less than four minutes after that, Grimes recovered a Darryl Clark fumble at the Texas 23, setting up Willis Ray Mackey's four-yard scoring run.

Loss of players to Selects hurt Olympic team most

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — Could it be that Canada's return to Olympic hockey will turn out to be a $750,000 mistake?

Was the unsettling performance turned in by the Canadian contingent at last week's pre-Olympic tournament a true indication of what we're to expect come February when the 1980 Winter Games take place in this Adirondack Mountain resort town?

Canadian coach Clare Drake doesn't think so, insisting that once the team is reunited with seven players who took part in the Izvestia tournament in Moscow, things will get back on track for the Olympic team.

The squad here failed to win a single game in the five-country invitational tournament, while the United States surprised virtually everyone by breezing through the competition undefeated.

And many things will have to change if Canada hopes to be in the medal picture when it reappears on the Olympic hockey scene after a 12-year absence. Canada's last appearance was a bronze-medal effort in 1968 at Grenoble, France.

Drake admits that at this point in the team's development, Canada lags behind Canada lags behind the U.S., particularly in adapting to the international-size ice surface, which is 14 feet wider than the conventional North American rink.

"We have to work on our puck control skills — our passing and puck handling," Drake says. "And somehow we've got to relate it to the larger ice surface.

"We know we don't have too many Guy Lafleurs on the team and so we must put together an over-all attack."

There was seldom any semblance of discipline to the Canadian play. The team often started well, playing the controlled style of game practised by the European clubs. But when they fell behind, the Canadians lapsed back into the unstructured style they're used to in North America.

In contrast to the Europeans and the Americans who were in constant motion, the Canadian players were often stationary when passes came their way. When they did manage to penatrate the opposition defence, finesse around the net was sorely missing.

Canada's power-play was also the most anaemic of the tournament, connecting on just one of 18 manpower advantages.

But Drake insists that when the team's entire complement of players gets back to work after Christmas, things will fall into place.

"No one likes to make too many excuses, but that was a very determining factor in our poor showing," Drake said of the decision toprovide players to the Izvestia tournament. "But that's not to detract from the boys who were with us because they did the best they could.

Soviets hit U.S. profit making

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The official Soviet sports newspaper Sovietsky Sport said Sunday the U.S. organizers of the coming Winter Olympics at Lake Placid appeared more interested in profits than in setting up the Games.

In a long article strongly critical of the Lake Placid organizing committee, the newspaper suggested conditions for participants, spectators and journalists were likely to be the worst of any winter Olympics.

"The Americans have the reputation of being business-like people with a practical bent," Sovietsky Sport, organ of the Soviet government's semi-ministerial sports committee, said.

"When they put forward the slogan of the Spartan Games, it seemed that their aim was to achieve a maximum of comfort with a minimum of expense. But no-one is even mentioning comfort now.

"One has the impression that the organizers are not in the least concerned about the Games themselves and have no time for the world of sport but are already counting up the profits the Games will bring," the Soviet newspaper declared.

"The businessmen of Lake Placid — and this is obvious — are going to absurd lengths in the chase after dollars, ignoring elementary moral criteria and the rules of good behaviour."

WBC clamps down

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — The World Boxing Council says any boxer knocked out during a WBC fight now must have a compulsory 60-day rest with no contact training during the first 30 days.

It also decreed a rest of 180 days after two consecutive knock-outs and a rest of one year and a complete medical examination after three consecutive knock-outs.

The WBC also announced the introduction of an international boxing passport or licence which will contain a boxer's complete fight record, a medical report of every bout and a medical clearance for the boxer's next contest.

The medical checkups include a mandatory "computerized axial temography" to detect any organic damage in a boxer regardless of size or importance.

In a statement, the WBC said the new regulations were aimed at humanizing boxing by avoiding fatal accidents.

It added: "The WBC has never had a fatal accident in any world title fight or any other fight of the card since its constitution in 1963 and has as its main goal the humanization of boxing to secure its existence."

The statement deplored the recent death in New York of middleweight boxer Willie Classen. Classen died in hospital on Nov. 28 without regaining conciousness after a bout five days earlier against U.S. compatriot Wilford Scypion.

The WBC said it would sponsor a world seminar and workshop for boxing managers and trainers in May, 1980, to instruct them properly in "neurological, physiological, dietectical, conditioning and other important medical matters."

Huge welcome for Ali

HONG KONG (AP) — Vietnamese refugees Saturday gave retired heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali the most tumultuous welcome heard here since U.S. vice-president Walter Mondale visited the British colony in September.

The three-time heavyweight champ was mobbed by Vietnamese children during his 45-minute tour of the North Kaitak camp, which houses some 10,000 boat people.

Ali's response was swift and seemingly genuine. He hugged and kissed the refugees and chased them around and the refugees in return ran after him.

Ali entered the camp dressed in an immaculate black suit but when he left, it was covered in dust and rumpled.

There was no welcoming committee for Ali except a few children who presented the boxer with a hand-drawn Christmas card. However, as Ali went along, the crowd swelled to such an extent that he could hardly move.

Just before he left the camp, a dozen of the refugee children lined up in a room and sang a Vietnamese song entitled Vietnam, in which the children expressed their love for their country.

In reply, Ali said "I am very happy to witness something that shouldn't be here. You are beautiful, humble and nice."

Ali later told reporters when he returns to the U.S., he will try his best to explain the refugee situation in Hong Kong.

"But I don't know what I can do. The United States has helped so many people. It has given them homes, hopes and food."

Coach's wife can't be aide

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — Candice Hisiro has been told once again that she cannot be an assistant football coach at a Frederick County high school.

By a 5-4 vote last week, the state board of education upheld a hearing examiner's report rejecting Mrs. Hisiro's claim she was a victim of sex discrimination in her venture to become a prep football coach.

The hearing examiner's report concluded that the woman had no claim of sex discrimination because she could not prove that she was a member of a "protected minority."

Mrs. Hisiro, the wife of the head football coach at Linganore high school in Frederick, "would have problems in supervision and evaluation" as an assistant coach and the head coach's wife, the report said.

Mrs. Hisiro's lawyer, Susan Russell, said she was surprised by the decision.

"I haven't read the decision yet, but I thought it would be a 5-4 vote the other way," she said. "I don't agree with the hearing examiner's report. It was obviously a misinterpretation."

Mrs. Hisiro applied for the assistant coaching job last April. She listed her qualifications as tennis coaching experience, sandlot football experience as a child and a physical education degree.

The only other applicant was an English teacher, who stated openly that he didn't want to be an assistant football coach. He was, however, appointed to the position.

Munson honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch has signed a bill that will rename a street near Yankee Stadium as Thurman Munson Way. Munson, the New York Yankees catcher and team captain, was killed Aug. 2 in a plane crash.

West Indies captures test

BRISBANE (AP) — England lost its first World Cup cricket match of the series as the West Indies surged to a commanding win at the Gabba oval Sunday.

The West Indian batsmen hit a powerful 218 for one to win by nine wickets after England had scored 217 for eight in its limit of 50 overs.

The win makes Australia chance of reaching the finals more difficult as the West Indies have now drawn level with two wins from five matches.

England still leads the series losing only one of the four games it has played.

"It was a make or break game for us but we looked winners all the way," delighted West Indian captain Clive Lloyd said.

Lloyd said his bowlers had been right on target but poor fielding had allowed England to add vital runs.

Peter Scott wins Welsh Steeplechase

CHEPSTOWN, Wales (Reuter) — Locally-trained Peter Scot stayed on strongly to win the Welsh Grand National steeplechase over three miles, six furlongs Saturday.

Peter Scott won by four lengths from Current Gold with Prince Rock third of the 15 runners. Peter Scot, trained by David Gandolfo, started at 8-1 and earned a purse of $33,250.

Junior tennis champs

MIAMI (AP) — Ecuador's Raul Viver and New York's Kathy Horvath won the 18-and-under titles Sunday in the Orange Bowl world junior tennis championships.

Viver, the first player from his country to win the annual tournament, defeated Peru's Pablo Arraya, 7-6, 7-1, 6-4, while Horvath, of Hopewell, N.Y., defeated Italy's Patrizia Murgo, 7-5, 6-0, in the girls' final.

In the doubles finals, it was Schalk Van der Merwe and Christo Steyn of South Africa over Tom Foster of the United States and Peter Lloyd of Australia, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4; Felicia Rashiatore and Susan Pendo of the United States over South Korea's Jeong Soon Lee and Ji Hyunko, 6-4, 6-1; and in mixed doubles, Van der Merwe and Jennifer Mudel over fellow South Africans Steyn and Christa Van der Walt, 6-1, 6-1.

HUMBOLDT, Sask. (CP) — Dave Balon said he resigned Tuesday as general-manager and coach of Humboldt Broncos of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League because he was having difficulty motivating players on the financially-troubled team.

Rivalero hits best stride

By The Canadian Press

Rivalero, who was a big disappointment for Calumet Farms early in the year, came on in the strech and won the $54,500 Roamer Handicap for three-year-olds before 19,171 at Aqueduct racetrack Saturday.

After the gelding son of Riva Ridge had won by two lengths over the favored entry of Musical Phantasy and Gallant Best, trainer John Veitch said: "He's got an awful lot of raw talent but he's never put it all together. He's ornery. He'll run four poor races, then a good one. Today was a good one."

Ridden by jockey Jeff Fell of Mississauga, Ont., who was scoring his 21st stakes victory of the New York season, Rivalero, carrying 114 pounds, ran the 1 3-16-mile event in 1:58 3-5. The winner paid $9.20, $4 and $4. Musical Phantasy edged his entrymate Gallant Best for the show spot, and the entry paid $3 and $3.

Fell said after the race that Rivalero "can be a very difficult horse to control."

"But that wasn't the case today. I got a really good trip. I only had to hit him a few times in the stretch."

It was Rivalero's first stakes victory. He earned a purse of $32,700 and now has a career bankroll of $126,184 with five victories and six seconds in 17 starts.

In Chepstown, Wales, locally-rained Peter Scot won the Welsh Grand National steeplechase, beating out 14 other entries in the three-mile, six-furlong event.

Peter Scot, trained by Daid Gandolfo and ridden by Paul Barton, earned a purse of $33,250. Finishing second was Current Gold with Prince Rock third.

Longshot Mr. Doty Bars was a surprising winner of the $150,000 Champion of Champions quarterhorse event at Los Alamitos.

Mr. Doty Bars, ridden by Robert Adair, won the 440-yard event by a nose over Pacific Dream. Another nose back in third place was Black Sable.

Mr. Doty Bars, a six-year-old who led all the way in clocking 21.78 seconds, paid $46.20, $17.60 and $7 in earning $75,000 for owners George and Shirley Loeb of Riverside, Calif.

Rubella immunization program fears aired

Fifteen per cent of the children in B.C. are not receiving vaccinations for rubella (German measles) and health officials are concerned about the long-term implications.

Despite a province-wide program to vaccinate all Grade 5 children, only 80 to 90 per cent are covered, said provincial epidemiologist Dr. Tony Larson said.

He said the rest are missed for a variety of reasons including refusals on religious grounds, general skepticism of government programs and families moving to different areas and missing the public health nurses' visits to schools.

Larson also said that because of staff shortages, it is not always possible to arrange repeat visits to vaccinate those children who were sick or on holidays and away from school at the time of the nurse's visit.

Larson is worried about long-term implications, especially for young women.

He said women who get the disease after they become pregnant stand a one-third chance of producing a deformed baby.

"It's a personal tragedy to the mother and her family, but it's a mighty expensive thing for all of us to bear.

"The cost of vaccinating every woman in B.C. is less than the cost of caring for just one deformed baby over its life."

Larsen said that last year there were two or three babies born in B.C. with rubella-caused deformities. No cases were reported in the Capital Region District.

He said that despite all the publicity given to the school vaccination program which began in 1970, a number of women are ignoring the risks they might face if they don't get a shot.

"We are concerned that we can't seem to attract more interest in the program," he said.

Groves seeks NDP nod

Victoria Labor Counell vice president Jack Groves has announced he will seek the NDP nomination for Esquimalt-Saanich riding in the Feb. 18 federal election.

He will be challenging Saanich Ald. Bob Cameron, who ran last time and has already announced he will seek the nomination again.

The nominating meeting is set for 8 p.m. Jan. 8 at St. Christopher Church Hall, Carey and Tillicum.

Groves has been active in union and credit union business. He was president of the Saanich Peninsula Credit Union for seven years and was a founder of the Provincial Services Co-op at Keating Crossroad.

He is on the executive of Local 118 of the International Woodworkers of America as well as being first vice president of the Victoria Labor Council.

The Communist party has also announced that Ernie Knott, of 4810 Sooke Road, has been nominated to contest the riding of Cowichan, Malahat, the Islands.

Others who have announced they intend to run include:

Steve Paproski, federal minister of fitness and amateur sport, who was acclaimed as the Progressive Conservative candidate for Edmonton North.

Patrick Nowlan, incumbant Tory from Annapolis Valley-Hants. He will contest his party's nomination at a Kingston convention Jan. 10.

Gus MacFarlane, former Liberal MP for Hamilton Mountain, will seek the Liberal nomination to try again.

He was defeated in the May 22 election by Tory Duncan Beattie.

And in Calgary, Prime Minister Clark's choice to succeed veteran Progressive Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams in Calgary North has given up his bid a few days after starting.

David Jenkins, a real estate developer who played a prominent role in Clark's 1975 leadership campaign, says he has decided to continue to work for Clark behind the scenes.

He said he would seek the nomination in Calgary North after Woolliams announced last Thursday he was retiring from politics.

Grit candidate named Jan. 8

Local Liberals will choose a candidate for the February election at a nominating meeting Jan. 8.

Pre-campaign committee chairman Joseph-Germain Dufour, president of the Oak Bay-Gordon Head Liberal Association, said his organization will actively support the Victoria Federal Liberal Association.

The Victoria group named Erma Dunn its fund-raising committee chairman. She will start soliciting support immediately after Christmas.

Other pre-campaign committee members have been assigned by both associations. Dufour said his group will be assisting in the search for possible new candidates.

He interprets an influx of new membership in the past week as added support for the party.

Dufour said prospective members, financial supporters or campaign workers may get information through himself, 598-1424; secretary Christine Panner of the Oak Bay-Gordon Head association, 598-0175, or the regional Liberal office, 382-8112.

Club raises $40,000

Cliff Baier, chairman of the Victoria Cosmopolitan Club's sports committee, recently presented a cheque to wheelchair patient Robbie Sorenson.

The cheque, to be given to the Wheelchair Sports Association, was part of $40,315 raised by the club this year for charitable organizations.

Sorenson won four gold medals at the B.C. Wheelchair Games in Vancouver last June.

He received a silver medal in archery and a bronze medal for the 100-metre dash at the Canadian Wheelchair Games, held in Vancouver in August.

Among the organizations helped by the club this year were the Shriners Hospital, Open Heart Society, Garth Homer Achievement Centre, Multiple Sclerosis Society, Canadian Diabetic Association and the Victoria Cancer Society.

Another contribution was the purchase of an elevator for the thermopendic pool at the Victoria Canadaian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society's clinic.

Escaper arrested Sunday

A William Head inmate who escaped from a guard while out on a day pass was free for less than 24 hours on the weekend, Colwood RCMP said today.

Police said Ronald James Sinclair, who fled near Colwood Corners around 11:15 p.m. Saturday, was arrested at 5:30 p.m. Sunday in a Wark Street apartment.

Lodges donate $1,019

The Oddfellows and Rebekahs' extended care hospital committee has donated $1,019.72 to the Aberdeen Hospital.

The donation was presented by acting president W.J. Gower to Charles Jackson, chairman of the Juan De Fuca Hospital Society.

The money will pay for installation of cable... one of the hospital's wings.

The Victoria YM-YWCA will have a variety of programs for children, ranging from two-hour workshops to full-day activities, during the Christmas school break.

"Because of the increasing number of single-parent families and families in which both parents must work, the Y has found that it's meeting an important community need by providing youth activities and day care programs for school-aged children during such school breaks as Christmas and Easter," says youth program director Gail Miller.

One of the programs is Christmas Capers which has been registered to capacity during the last three years with 40 children under the care of trained councillors during each working day of the Yuletide season. Catering to the 6- to 11-year-old group, the program utilizes the Y's downtown facilities and also includes visits to the Provincial Museum and other field trips.

Fee for the program is $30.

Six workshops between Jan. 2 to Jan. 4 are planned for children between 13 and 17. Teenagers will be able to enjoy a program of weight training, learning safe effective techniques in the use of gym equipment and free weights.

Choreographer Gini Lefere Folley will conduct the workshop Show Dance, introducing basic steps and kickline routines from such shows as Cabaret, Godspell and Jesus Christ Superstar.

Jazz dance will be highlighted in a two-hour workshop. Other workshops will be held on badminton, squash and racquetball.

The two-hour workshops are free to Y members and will cost $1 to $1.50 for non-members.

A three-day outdoor recreation adventure is planned at Camp Thunderbird for students between 12 and 14 years of age. The program will include hiking, rock climbing, camp crafts and camp fires. Hot meals and heated accomodation will be provided.

Other activities at the Y will include recreational swimming, Christmas parties, "Funtasia" and family programs.

Seven injured in 2 accidents

Seven people landed in hospital following separate single-car accidents in the Victoria area early Saturday.

Although both cars were demolished, none of the injuries were serious.

Lawrence Glover of 5095 Wesley, Gary William Zozula of 5766 Sparker and Michele Olnotto of 4983 Cordova Bay Road, all aged 19, were released from Royal Jubilee following treatment for cuts and bruises.

Oak Bay police said the car, driven by Glover, sideswiped a parked car on Lansdowne and then slammed into a light standard.

The car was destroyed as was the lamp standard which was sheared in three pieces.

The accident occurred at 1:40 a.m.

About 20 minutes later Colwood RCMP were called to an accident at Highway 1A near Prince Robert Drive where a car containing four persons hit a tree.

One the passengers, Joseph Claude Doucette, 29, of 1998 Oak was admitted to Victoria General. Two others, Ross Court, 19, of 2822 Colquitz, and Rory McCormick, 19, of 3114 Ontario were admitted to Royal Jubilee.

The three suffered head and chest injuries and are listed in good condition.

The fourth occupant, Colleen Vincent, 17, of 3371 Rolston was treated for head cuts at Victoria General and later released.

B.C. Rail talks resuming

VANCOUVER (CP) — Informal talks between the Council of Railway Unions and the strike-bound British Columbia Railway adjourned Sunday until Thursday.

Don Munro, chairman of the provincial labor relations board, presided over the talks which began Saturday, the first since the 2,200 workers went on strike against the Crown-owned railway Dec. 18.

The strike started 48 hours after union negotiators walked away from last-minute talks with company officials over issues such as manning and retroactive pay. Contracts for the seven unions expired July 31.

The company has offered wages and other monetary benefits totalling 14 per cent over 29 months, while the unions want a 30-per-cent raise in a one-year contract.

Meanwhile, in Prince George, B.C. Rail workers have lifted their picket line at the Canadian National Railways yard.

The half-dozen pickets left the CNR yard Sunday night, 36 hours after they had established the line and shut down CNR operations.

No reason was given for the withdrawal, a CNR spokesman said, but "we're certain they will not be back."

Free shots

Provincial health officials expect about 60,000 persons will take advantage of the ministry's flu vaccine program this winter.

The shots are free for persons over the age of 65 and those with chronic lung, heart, kidney or metabolic diseases.

Anyone else who wishes to be vaccinated will have to pay for the vaccine himself.

FLQ's Allard arraigned after return

MONTREAL (CP) — Alain Allard, an alleged former member of the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec, was arraigned today on charges of planting three bombs at political clubs and a Quebec Liquor Corp. store in 1968.

Allard, 33, appeared in sessions court about 40 hours after returning to Quebec from Cuba, where he spent 11 years of exile. He was believed to have been the last FLQ exile on the Caribbean island.

He came back to face the court case a year after the return of a fellow Quebec exile, Jean-Pierre Charette, who pleaded guilty to precisely the same bombing charges in March, 1979.

The short, wiry Allard stood calmly through about a minute of proceedings in sessions court. Sporting long dark hair and an ample mustache, he wore a checked sport jacket, blue pants and square rimmed glasses.

He was accompanied by his Cuban wife, Soilia, and their five-year-old daughter, Evelyn, who chatted constantly in Spanish and gazed curiously at the French-speaking lawyers in the courtroom. The trio returned late Saturday aboard a flight from Havana to nearby Mirabel International Airport.

Defence lawyer Pierre Poupart chose trial by judge and jury for Allard. This means he is considered to be pleading not guilty, although he is not required to enter a formal plea unless he is sent to trial.

Judge Francois Beaudoin set Feb. 15 as a tentative date for Allard's preliminary-hearing.

Allard is free on a promise to appear and a pledge to pay $500 if he fails to show up. He was released by Montreal police Sunday morning after being questioned and fingerprinted by detectives, who met him at the airport.

Allard is charged with planting two bombs at downtown political clubs belonging to the Quebec Liberal and Union Nationale parties on Oct. 14, 1968. Neither bomb exploded. He is also charged with planting a bomb that did explode, breaking a window pane but causing no other damage or injuries, at a west-end liquor outlet on Sept. 29, 1968.

Two months after his return in January, 1979, Charette pleaded guilty to the same charges and was sentenced to six months and three years probation. He was released on parole after serving three months, and shortly after published a book about his experiences in Cuba.

Lawyer Poupart indicated outside court that Allard might fight his case. He would wait to examine police evidence before making a final decision.

"He and his family will try to survive as normal citizens in this country," Poupart had said Saturday.

Lonely Yule? Just call NEED

If you're lonely, for any reason, Christmas Day can be the saddest time of the year.

But the volunteers who man Victoria's NEED crisis line (386-6323) will be on the job around-the-clock helping to ease that loneliness.

Executive director Anita Buckley says enough of NEED's 75 volunteers have each given up two hours of their time to ensure the switchboard will be manned at all times.

The volunteers range in age from people in their 20s to some in their 60s.

All the volunteers are graduates of the NEED training program which is staffed by members of the counselling psychology field.

All volunteers agree to remain anonymous to put those who call at ease but the warmth and caring they give over the phone is felt by every caller.

Those who would like to try their hand at being a NEED volunteer can learn more about the operation by phoning the office at 386-6328.

MD quota 'big stick'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A long-awaited report on province-wide health care takes a "carrot and stick" approach, says the registrar of the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons.

"It's all right by me if the government wants to offer carrots," J. A. Hutchison said Saturday.

But the stick is the report's proposal to limit the number of doctors billing the plan, he said — "I think that's a pretty big stick."

"They are saying that a number of doctors would not be able to bill for their services in urban areas. It is a stick we've never before seen wielded by government."

B.C. has enough doctors, but they are too highly concentrated in large population areas, says the report, prepared by the advisory committee on medical manpower headed by Wesley Black, former health minister in the W. A. C. Bennett government.

One way to resolve this would be to offer medical students a bursary-loan of $5,000 a year while studying, on the condition they serve an isolated area for one year for each $5,000 received, says the report, released Friday.

Another suggestion is to offer $25,000 income tax-free grants to doctors who sign a three-year contract to practise in any isolated community designated by the ministry of health.

A further way to limit concentration of doctors in attractive areas, the report says, would be to limit the number of doctors in any one area billing the Medical Services Plan.

"Doctors in urban areas see about 30 patients a day," said Hutchison.

"In about two weeks the doctor in a community of 200 would have seen everybody there, then he'd just sit around and be bored."

Health Minister Rafe Mair, who released the 275-page report Friday, said he is not impressed with the report, and felt Black overstepped the guidelines set down for the study.

Spot trade makes oil skyrocket

By CARL HARTMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — An important but obscure force — known to experts as the Rotterdam spot market — is quietly but relentlessly driving up worldwide oil prices.

Oil markets are so hectic these days that the big producers in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries ended their meeting last week without agreeing on a common price. One important reason for the break in price discipline is the simple fact that oil is commanding high prices on the spot market.

Late last week, U.S. Energy Secretary Charles Duncan said some spot oil was being sold at $50 a barrel — more than twice OPEC's recent maximum.

The Rotterdam market doesn't exist in any one place. Instead, it is a network of highly sophisticated brokers the world over who deal largely by telephone and Telex.

While many dealers have offices in Rotterdam, the world's largest oil port and refinery centre, others operate from Singapore, Houston, Curacao, New York and elsewhere.

As the brokers wheel and deal, an oil cargo on its way from the Middle East to the United States can change ownership several times in the course of a month's voyage.

The oil brokers act like businessmen everywhere, trying to buy cheap and sell high. When they guess wrong they can lose their shirts. These days, it's hard to guess wrong; any oil bought today is almost certain to be worth more tomorrow.

Oil that has been selling under contract for $23 a barrel can fetch twice as much on the open market. So, says Jay Vivari, an energy department spokesman, some producers have been diverting oil from contracts and putting it up for grabs.

In the oil business, a contract isn't the sort of legal paper that enables you to call the cops if the other fellow is welching. For one thing, there is usually a government involved on the selling side. That puts the oil company at a disadvantage.

Once a spot purchaser has taken over a shipment, he can resell it as he likes — except that Nigeria, for example, would be angry if a cargo of its oil reached South Africa and Libya would be equally upset if it found any of its products going to Israel.

The Iranians have become more active sellers on the spot market since President Carter banned imports from Iran.

In calmer days, only about three per cent of the oil in world trade was sold on the spot market, although some experts thought even then that spot prices were the tail that wagged the dog. Recently the proportion of oil for sale on the spot market has risen to an estimated 10 to 15 per cent.

If you add in a new type of sale that is somewhere between a spot transaction and a contract, the total may reach 30 per cent.

For example, Japan recently bought about 20 million barrels of oil from Iran at prices up to $44. That provoked a high U.S. official to says that the Japanese were undercutting efforts to free the hostages in Tehran. The Japanese, he said, jumped into the market "with unseemly haste."

Smaller U.S. oil companies also must turn to the spot market to meet delivery commitments. One estimateis that U.S. companies now may be seeking as much as 350,000 barrels a day — about half what the U.S. used to import from Iran.

Guns' recoil fatal to two

PORT ANGELES (AP) — Three duck hunters in a canoe all fired at the same time and the recoil capsized the boat, sending two of the men to their deaths during the weekend, says a survivor.

Richard Leighton said after the accident Saturday he used duck decoys to keep afloat on Lake Aldwell, about eight miles west of Port Angeles. He said he swam ashore and hiked to the Elwha Lodge on the lake.

Leighton, 22, is a petty officer at the Coast Guard air station at Port Angeles. He called the air station directly and the first rescue helicopter arrived in eight minutes, said Coast Guard spokesman Lt. Philip Johnson.

The helicopters airlifted the two hunters to a Port Angeles hospital, Johnson said. They died later in the afternoon after emergency treatment for hypothermia — loss of body heat or exposure. Johnson said they had been in the water about an hour.

He identified the dead as Coast Guard Petty Officer Michael D. Bultena, 31, of Sioux Falls, S.D., stationed at the Coast Guard air station in Port Angeles, and Lynn B. Rhodes, 22, a Port Angeles native.

Leighton was treated and released from Olympic Memorial Hospital in Port Angeles, a nursing supervisor said Saturday.

Johnson said all three men were wearing life preservers. He said the canoe was about 300 yards offshore when it tipped.

Mrs. Dennis Barber of the Elwha Resort said current from the Elwha River was strong on the lake because of recent rains. She estimated the temperature of the lake, which is fed by melting snow, at 38 degrees. The temperature of the air was estimated around 40 degrees.

More accused in Park slaying

SEOUL (UPI) — Gen. Chung Seung-hwa, former army chief of staff and martial law commander, will be prosecuted for his part in the assassination of President Park Chung-hee, the Defence Ministry said today.

"Chung Seung-hwa will be prosecuted for assisting Kim Jae-kyu's attempted insurrection," a spokesman said. "Proper measures will be taken against the other four generals according to their crimes. They were followers of Chung."

The spokesman told a news conference that a lieutenant general and three major generals were also arrested following the bloody military shakeup Dec. 12 when the former army chief was taken into custody.

The spokesman said three soldiers were killed and 20 others wounded in a series of clashes late that night.

The arrests were the latest developments in the Oct. 26 assassination of Park, gunned down by Kim Jae-kyu, a retired army lieutenant general and former head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency.

Kim, Park's chief secretary Kim Kae-won, and five other KCIA men were sentenced to death last Thursday for killing Park and five presidential bodyguards. Another KCIA man drew three years in prison for destroying evidence.

Those arrested with Chung include Gen. Lee Kun-yung, commander of the 3rd Army; Maj. Gen. Mun Hong-ku, director of the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff office; Maj. Gen. Chung Byung-ju, commander of the Special Forces; and Maj. Gen. Chang Tae-wan, commander of the Capital Garrison Command.

Yet another strange twist in U.K. spy scandals

LONDON (AP) — Britain's spy scandals, almost as twisted as the plot of a James Bond novel, took a new turn Sunday when John Cairncross, a retired diplomat and treasury official, was quoted in newspaper reports as saying he spied for the Soviet Union in the 1930s.

The Sunday Times said it was told by Cairncross, who now lives in Rome, that he supplied diplomatic and political information to the late Guy Burgess in the Burgess-Maclean-Philby diplomatic spy network.

Burgess and Donald Maclean fled to Moscow in 1951 and were joined there later by Harold (Kim) Philby. All three had worked in the British Embassy in Washington and other key diplomatic posts.

The Sunday Times report said that after Burgess and Maclean fled, security authorities questioned Cairncross, who told them the truth and then left the civil service. His role in the affair was kept quiet and he went abroad, working for international agencies. For a time he was stationed in Bangkok.

His brother, Sir Alec Cairncross, is a former government economic adviser.

Author Andrew Boyle's recent book on the spy chain, The Climate of Treason, led to the naming of royal art adviser Anthony Blunt as another self-confessed Soviet spy who served the network. Boyle told The Observer newspaper that Cairncross was one of six diplomats under suspicion after Burgess and Maclean defected.

"The six were not really in the first rank of spies," Boyle was quoted as saying. "Cairncross, I understand, played only a junior role in passing information, and that for a short period in mid-1939."

There was no immediate government comment on the new disclosure.

Like Burgess, Cairncross, now 66, was at Trinity College, Cambridge, in the 1930s and belonged to a Communist student group there. He said he knew Maclean, Philby and Blunt, as well as Burgess.

Cairncross said he left the British foreign office for the treasury office because he was "disgusted" by what he said was the appeasement of Hitler policy practised in the 1930s by top foreign office officials. When he was eventually interrogated, he said he was confronted with his own notes on foreign office attitudes, which he had given to Burgess, who left them behind when he defected.

Blunt has said he gave the Russians information on Nazi intelligence during the Second World War, which he felt the British government ought to have handed over anyway, because the two countries were allies in the anti-Nazi struggle.

The Sunday Times said that at the request of Cairncross it would not publish his address in Rome. It said he lives alone in a small fourth-floor apartment, after separating from his wife, Gabriella.

The newspaper quoted Cairncross as saying: "In the light of all this, I think, instead of staying in my flat for Christmas, the best thing is to disappear because life will be a bit tricky."

U.S. 'confident' no sanction veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite a lack of any assurances from the Russians, the United States believes the Soviet Union will support its effort in the United Nations to impose economic sanctions against Iran, U.S. officials say.

"They understand the importance we attach to this," State Department spokesman David Passage said.

"We are confident they understand the implications for U.S.-Soviet relations should they be seen to be the cause of the U.N. not taking action, if it does not take action in this matter."

Nine of the council's 15 members must approve the action. In addition, any of the five permanent members, including Russia and China, can veto the sanctions.

President Carter said Friday he would ask the world organization to impose the sanctions in response to Iran's holding of 50 American hostages in Tehran.

The Soviets supported the U.N. Security Council resolution calling for release of the hostages and the World Court ruling that they must be freed.

Meanwhile, a Time magazine poll shows Carter's handling of the Iran crisis has made him the solid favorite for renomination and re-election.

Time said most of 1,041 respondents in the Yankelovich, Skelly and White Inc., sampling said Carter has dealt with the crisis "just right."

The telephone poll of voters, conducted between Dec. 10 and Dec. 12, shows Carter leads Sen. Edward Kennedy among Democrats and independents by 53 per cent to 33 per cent.

Many respondents faulted Kennedy for his statements on Chappaquiddick and other issues, and his "misstep" of denouncing the deposed shah of Iran while Americans were being held hostage in Tehran.

A Los Angeles Times nationwide poll released during the weekend said Reagan is at least a 3-1 favorite to win the GOP nomination.

In amother development, Iran asked Panamanian President Aristides Royo today to extradite the deposed shah of Iran, Tehran Radio said.

The radio broadcast a letter from Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh to the Panamanian head of state which said:

"Iranians are in no doubt that, despite frequent pressure by the United States, the Panamanians and their government will not tolerate the presence of the shah in Panama."

An accompanying letter to the Panamanian foreign minister, published by the official Pars news agency, said the shah committed crimes on an "international scale."

The shah arrived in Panama from the United States on Dec. 15.

The letter to the Panamanian foreign ministry said he should face an international court along the lines of the Nuernberg court after the Second World War.

Turkish jet crash leaves 39 dead

ANKARA (AP) — A Turkish Airlines jet, only two minutes from touchdown at Ankara airport, slammed into a fog-shrouded hill, killing 39 of the 43 persons aboard, the airlines said.

A stewardess and three passengers survived the Sunday crash and were in good condition today, authorities said.

All 39 passengers and four crewmembers aboard the twin-jet Fokker F-28 were Turks, the airline said.

The plane slashed into Cubuk Hill, 100 kilometres north of Ankara, while on a flight from the Black Sea port city of Samsun.

"I made the regular announcement for landing and then this disaster happened — I cannot remember what and how it happened," said stewardess Nilay Ercan, who was thrown from the jet when it broke apart on impact.

"When I opened my eyes I found myself in the middle of a grassy field and then I saw the burning plane chunks," she told reporters from her hospital bed.

So far authorities say they have identified 15 of the bodies taken from the charred and broken aircraft. They said they feared some of the badly burned remains may never be identified.

Aviation officials said they have not determined the cause of the crash, but they noted that the area was blanketed by heavy fog. Ankara has been sheeted by heavy fog for much of the past week, forcing intermittent closings of the city's airport, the officials said. It was opened at the time of the crash.

It was the third F-28 to crash since Turkish Airlines bought five of the Dutch-made medium range jets in 1973. The Turkish Civil Aviation Administration grounded the remaining two pending the outcome of its investigation. The two previous F-28 crashes in 1974 and 1975 killed more than 100 persons.

Civil aviation chief Asri Ay, head of the commission investigating the crash, said one of the plane's "black box" flight recorders was found in the wreckage.

Meanwhile, in Peru, rescue teams have sighted wreckage of a Canadian-built Peruvian air force cargo plane which crashed while on a passenger run between two jungle towns, authorities said today. The fate of 29 persons on board was unknowwn.

The aeronautics ministry said the plane crashed Saturday shortly after taking off from Pucallpa, a major jungle port on the Ucayali River, some 840 kilometres northeast of Lima. The plane was reported missing when it failed to arrive at the village of Puerto Esperanza, about 30 km away.

African states drop Rhodesia trade sanctions

DAR ES SALAAM (CP) — The five front-line African states that have backed guerrillas fighting in Rhodesia have decided to end trade sanctions against the Salisbury regime, Tanzanian Foreign Minister Benjamin Mkapa said.

He said Tanzania ended sanctions today, and that the other front-line states — Zambia, Mozambique, Botswana and Angola — are expected to take similar action.

Mkapa's statement said that the decision followed a UN Security Council move to end trade sanctions imposed by the world body 14 years ago when Rhodesia's white minority unilaterally declared independence from Britain in an attempt to forestall black majority rule.

Last Friday, a peace agreement was signed in London aimed at ending the guerrilla war in Rhodesia and paving the way for new elections leading to black-majority rule. A British governor arrived in Salisbury last week reasserting British authority over the breakaway colony.

A Commonwealth force sent to monitor the truce between the warring factions went into operation today, but a Rhodesian military spokesman said the war "is still going on."

British troops, part of a 1,300-member force, will take up positions with the Rhodesian army, as part of the cease-fire arrangement.

A Rhodesian military spokesman told reporters, "We are following the cease-fire terms, but there has been no de-escalation on the other side. The war is still going on."

The spokesman said four black Rhodesian soldiers were killed in clashes over the weekend, but there no reported deaths of civilians. Guerrilla casualties were not known, he said.

In Mozambique, President Samora Machel told a rally called Sunday to celebrate the Rhodesian settlement that air links between his country and neighboring Rhodesia will be resumed in the near future.

He said that road and rail links will also be reopened shortly.

Until Mozambique closed its border with Rhodesia in 1975, Mozambican ports and railways were the primary link land-locked Rhodesia had with the sea.

A Mozambican government statement last week said that the country has lost more than $500 million in port and transit fees since sanctions were imposed.

In Zambia, President Kenneth Kaunda told a meeting of Asian businessmen that he expects to see a sharp upturn in the troubled Zambian economy following the lifting of sanctions against Rhodesia.

Kaunda said he is establishing relations with Rhodesia, lifting the trade embargo and reopening border crossing-points.

But the two bridges crossing the Zambesi River border at Chirundu and Victoria Falls are unlikely to open to traffic until customs posts have been staffed and necessary repairs carried out. The bridges have been closed since early 1973.

Their eventual reopening was expected to relieve pressure on the "southern route" railway through Rhodesia which has been land-locked Zambia's only foreign trade outlet since Rhodesian forces destroyed key road and rail bridges in other parts of the country in October and November.

Corn imports, needed to avert famine after a bad Zambian harvest this year, were resumed only last week.

The Rhodesians had cut off corn shipments in retaliation for Zambia's backing for the Patriotic Front guerrillas striking into Rhodesia from Zambian territory.

In addition to the effects of the war, the Zambian economy has suffered badly from the fall in world copper prices in the mid-1970s, the continuing rise in oil prices and inefficient management in many sectors.

The boy with the heart 'that wants to live'

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis. (UPI) — At first doctors thought Darven Miller was dead. He had been under the freezing water of Duncan Creek for 30 minutes, his skin had turned a deep blue and his body temperature was 82 degrees.

But the 11-year-old boy with the heart "that wants to live" will be home for Christmas in good physical and mental condition.

Miller broke through the ice of Duncan Creek Dec. 13. The Chippewa Falls Fire Department recovered his body an hour later. He had been under water for 30 minutes.

His lungs full of water, Miller was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in Chippewa Falls. His pupils were dilated. He was not breathing. His heartbeat was very low and erratic. His body temperature was 87 degrees and fell to 82.

"When he came in, he was, by clinical evaluation, dead," Dr. Bruno Rahn said. He said Miller was given shots of adrenalin and an electric shock to revive his heart, but he was very cold. His body remained a deep blue color.

"I told the staff, if there's any chance to do some good, we're going to have to get some heat back into his body," Rahn said.

The staff wrapped the boy's body in a heating wrap that circulated water heated to 105 degrees around his body, gave him more injections and two more jolts of electricity.

The monitor showed an erratic bleep, and one hour and 10 minutes after Miller had been brought to the hospital, his cardiopulmonary system began working.

"First, when he starts to get a heartbeat back, you say, 'Oh my God, he's been dead 20 minutes. What if he survives?'" Rahn said. "You can't play God. Here's a heart that wants to live, so you support it."

Then the boy's pupils responded to light, Rahn said.

"We had another branch put back on the tree, so you're now supporting something of a nervous system, you're now supporting circulation, too, so again you can't quit," Rahn said.

"We got nothing then except a little bleep as we kept working," he said. "And I think it was the godsend that kept us from facing the ultimate decision: Are we saving a vegetable or what are we doing?'"

The boy was reported in stable condition. He has a normal diet and his mental condition was reported good.

His hands remained swollen and unable to grasp objects, but his personal physician, Dr. Romeo Sangalang, predicted the boy would make a full recovery.

Bike deaths up

JOHANNESBURG (CP) — Although the motor vehicle accident death rate has dropped this year in South Africa, motorcycle accidents have increased by seven per cent. The higher motorcycle rate follows a 94.7 per cent increase this year in sales of the bikes.

Pope to discuss Kung ban

TUEBINGEN, West Germany (Reuter) — Pope John Paul has invited members of the West German Bishops' Conference to Rome to discuss the teaching ban imposed on theology professor Hans Kung, a spokesman at the professor's university said Sunday.

The 51-year-old Swiss professor's right to teach at Tuebingen University has not been formally withdrawn by his bishop in West Germany and it was hoped a solution could be found, said Dr. Karl-Josef Kuschel of the Ecumenical Research Institute.

The West German church leaders, including the chairman of the Bishops' Conference, Cardinal Josef Hhoeffner, have been invited to the Vatican between Christmas and the New Year, he said.

Kung was barred from teaching last week by a Vatican investigatory committee on the grounds that he had failed to adhere to church doctrine, especially concerning the infallibility of the Pope.

Kung conferred with his bishop, Georg Moser of the Rottenburg-Stuttgart diocese, on Saturday and Sunday.

Moser returned last night from Rome where he met the Pope to discuss Kung's position, Kuschel said.

Kung, director of the Ecumenical Research Institute, has given lectures at the university, attended by some 2,000 people, since the Vatican's action against him.

His position at the university will not be changed until the result of the meeting between the bishops and the Pope were known.

New IRA front suspected

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist experts believe an Irish Republican Army cell operating out of Western Europe is responsible for the Christmas letter-bomb blitz aimed at prominent Britons.

The increasing activity of the IRA unit, believed to be based in West Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands, adds a new front to Britain's war with the IRA guerrillas, who are fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

The Scotland Yard experts, who declined to be identified, say the European unit is made up of "Provos," members of the IRA's extremist Provisional wing.

Authorities blame the European unit for at least two assassinations, in Brussels and The Hague, this year, as well as bombings of British targets in West Germany and Belgium.

There is speculation the cell also was behind the abortive attempt to assassinate then-NATO chief military commander Gen. Alexander Haig earlier this year near Mons, Belgium. The U.S. general, now retired, was not injured in the landmine ambush. British officials suspect the would-be assassins mistook Haig for a senior British army officer who used the same road and drove a similar car.

The Provisional IRA command in Dublin claimed responsibility Friday for the Brussels-mailed letter bombs that began turning up in Britain last week. Eight were found in Britain and two more were intercepted in Brussels.

None of the recipients has been injured. But British explosives experts say the small charges, mailed in book-size envelopes, can kill.

Scotland Yard has sent two officers from its anti-terrorist squad to Brussels to help Belgian authorities try to track down the IRA cell.

Forensic experts who examined defused letter bombs say they bear all the trademarks of Shane O'Doherty, a top Provo bomb-maker who set up an IRA bomb base in the Dutch city of Tilburg near the Belgium border several years ago.

O'Doherty, once the Provisionals' top explosives man in Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second city, is serving a 20-year prison term for masterminding an IRA letter bomb campaign in 1973.

The current spate of bombs were probably made by terrorists trained by O'Doherty, police believe.

British authorities have known of the IRA's links in Europe since soon after sectarian fighting erupted in Northern Ireland in August, 1969. British intelligence helped intercept a two-ton shipment of Czechoslovakian arms en route to Ireland at Amsterdam's Schipol airport in 1971.

The guerrillas are believed to have contact with European terrorist groups such as West Germany's Red Army Faction, Italy's Red Brigades and Spain's Basque ETA movement.

Police believe the Provo group in Europe is supported by leftist extremists in West Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands, who provide safe houses, intelligence and arms.

Police in Northern Ireland and the neighboring Irish republic alerted the Yard more than a year ago that known and suspected IRA men had gone to the Continent, ostensibly as construction laborers attracted by fat paycheques.

Intelligence sources in London believe the IRA cell is probably headquartered in Amsterdam, where the Provisionals are long known to have had safe houses.

Informed sources here said British intelligence has set up a special surveillance unit in the British Embassy in The Hague to keep tabs on the IRA's clandestine activities in the Netherlands.

Police linked the cell to the killing March 22 of Sir Richard Sykes, British ambassador in The Hague and a top diplomatic security specialist.

Belgian police also blamed the IRA for assassinating Belgian banker Andrew Michaux in Brussels the same day, mistaking him for Sir John Killick, a senior official of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, who lived next door to Michaux.

A Belgian witness was shown Scotland Yard files and identified a known Provo as Michaux's killer. The suspect was one of 19 convicted guerrillas who blasted their way out of Ireland's Portloaise top-security prison in 1974.

The primarily Roman Catholic IRA guerrillas want to unite Northern Ireland with the mainly Roman Catholic Irish republic, a move opposed by most of Ulster's Protestant majority.

Fires threatening black Christmas

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — The worst fire in 20 years in the Blue Mountains west of Sydney raged out of control along a 10-mile front Sunday and threatened several townships with a charred and blackened Christmas.

Fire officials Sunday warned about 2,000 residents of Beraming and Mt. Wilson to prepare to evacuate their homes as the fire, fanned by 35 mph winds, headed eastward towards the townships. About 12 homes and farms have been destroyed.

Officials reported no casualties, although many of the nearly 1,000 troops, air force personnel and volunteer firefighters battling the blaze have been treated for smoke inhalation and minor burns.

A dense veil of smoke hung over the western and northern suburbs of Sydney.

Fire officials said the bush fire flared about midday Sunday from several smaller fires that have been burning for about a week.

Firefighters gave up fighting the fires directly and one controller said "All we can hope to do is concentrate on saving lives and property."

Blue Mountains Fire Controller Phil Koperberg described the conditions as "frightening and appalling."

"If the fires come out of the valley at the wrong time and place there will be incredible devastation," he said.

Arafat predicts Israeli outbreak

COLOGNE (Reuter) — Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said Sunday that Israel's economic difficulties could push it into a military adventure in the Middle East.

In an interview with West German radio, Arafat also called on Europeans to take "courageous steps" to take into account the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people to achieve a peaceful solution of the Arab-Israeli conflict in 1980.

The PLO acknowledges the importance of Europe in influencing international public opinion and particularly that of the United States, he said.

Leftists threaten to kill ambassador

SAN SALVADOR (AP) Leftist guerrillas holding Archibald Gardner Dunn, South African ambassador to El Salvador, said Saturday they will execute him if their demands are not met by Jan. 15.

The Farabundo Marti Liberation Forces, which kidnapped Dunn outside the South African Embassy on Nov. 28, is demanding that newspapers in 102 countries including El Salvador publish a manifesto critical of the country's military-civilian junta before Dunn is released.

"The total or partial failure to fulfil this will be sufficient to execute the ambassador," the group said in a communique sent to the news media.

Accompanying the communique sent to media organizations was a photograph of the 60-year-old ambassador in a "revolutionary jail" and the document the guerrillas want published.

The document was unsigned, and a law approved by the junta Saturday forbids publication of a political communique not signed by five persons.

UN hasn't won any wars, but has won several battles

By JOHN WARD

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — In the charter of the United Nations the top priority is "to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war." In the 1970s, that goal was difficult to achieve.

Over the last 10 years, war claimed thousands of lives, from the jungles of Southeast Asia to the deserts of the Middle East. More often than not, the appeals of the UN Security Council for peaceful settlement were ignored by the combatants.

But the UN's defenders give it credit in other areas and look forward to better things in the 1980s.

Doug Roche, Canadian MP and a delegate to last fall's session of the General Assembly, is one who sees an important and continuing role for the world organization.

He conceded in an interview that the UN has no magic formula to prevent war.

"It's true that there have been a lot of localized wars," he said. "But the UN has accomplished more than the 1970s than it has been given credit for."

It was in the forefront of the information exchange that Roche sees as vital if the world is to find solutions to the problems of famine, poverty and disease.

A series of UN conferences on such subjects as food, population, water, human settlement and industrialization during the last decade brought together experts from many fields and countries. These discussions, Roche said, produced a tremendous body of research.

"What these conferences have shown is that the root of poverty is trans-national, that it goes beyond boundaries and that there is an interlocking nature to problems."

The UN is demonstrating that it is in everyone's interest to promote economic stability and security, he said. One of the most important steps was the start of what is called the North-South dialogue, between the industrialized countries which are generally situated in the Northern Hemisphere and the poorer, less-developed countries to the south.

"The age of human rights has arrived," Roche said. "We now understand that human rights must be viewed from not just a civil and political perspective, but also from that of physical safety and economic and social rights."

Other perennial questions at the UN are still far from solution.

In 1978, after years of lobbying, a special session of the General Assembly was devoted to disarmament. It approved a lengthy statement of principles but achieved no concrete agreements.

That is not the fault of the UN, Roche said. "It's the fault of nations that are still caught up in what is perceived to be a necessary reliance on arms to bring peace."

He said the UN has been justly criticized for building a weighty bureaucracy and as a place for posturing and bickering. On the other hand, the organization was doing more than just talking. Its development program, for instance, had more than 5,000 projects operating around the world.

UN peacekeeping forces, drawn from various countries including Canada, to the world's most populous country.

In December of the same year, Kurt Waldheim of Austria became the fourth secretary-general of the organization, replacing Burma's U Thant.

Eighteen new members joined the UN, bringing the present membership to 152 countries.

LUDVIG LOOK-ALIKES were participants in contest staged in Madison, Wis. by music teacher Laura Erickson, right, to see who could most closely resemble Beethoven. Erickson held event to stimulate student interest in work and life history of the musician. Hair was hardest effect to create.

Jo'burg fights spider plague

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — An invasion of poisonous spiders whose bite can be deadly and for which there is no known cure has sent medical researchers scrambling to find an antidote for the violin spider's lethal toxin.

Known as a cousin of the Brown Recluse spider found in dry areas of the United States, the violin spider has invaded Johannesburg in hordes after an "accidental contamination" of the mines that surround the city, and may have spread to other areas in the country.

Health officials have issued a public warning about the dangers of the tiny brown and orange spider that seems to be breeding prolifically in the city's suburbs. The spider emerges only at night to hunt for food.

The head of the violin spider research program at the South African Institute of Health and Medical Research said all attempts at neutralizing the spider's poison have been unsuccessful.

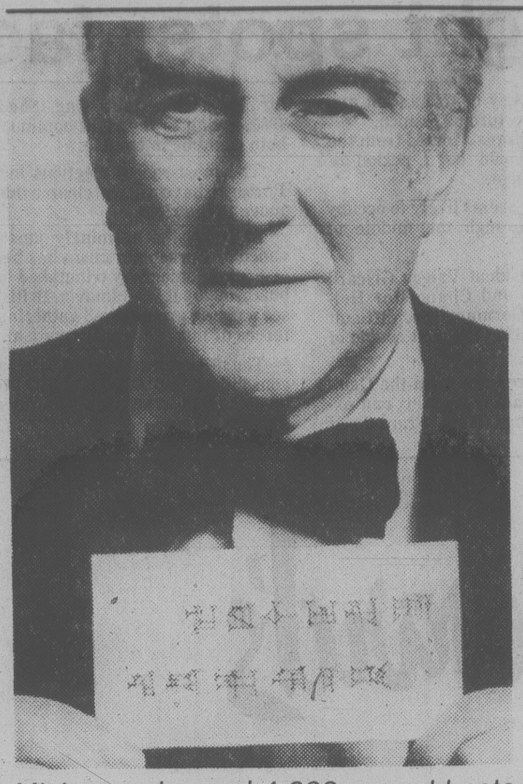
"All the pilot experiments have been unsuccessful but we hope to find an antidote soon. I think we are at least a year away," said Gerry Newlands.

The bite of the violin spider is painless, and about 90 percent of its victims are attacked at night when they accidentally press a spider against their clothing while asleep.

The effects of the spider's bite are felt hours afterwards and are difficult to diagnose.

Once bitten, healthy adults have been known to be incapacitated for months. "It causes immense suffering. I wouldn't ask for a second helping," said Newlands.

The researcher said he feared the spider could be spread throughout the country by accident if the necessary precautions were not taken.



Michanowsky, and 4,000-year-old note

Even oldest written note urged diplomatic immunity

NEW YORK (CP) — Even the ancient Mesopotamians recognized the importance of diplomatic immunity and the safety of envoys, says explorer George Michanowsky.

An expert on cuneiform astromical texts, he has tracked down what probably is the world's oldest diplomatic warning on the subject of immunity, written about 4,000 years ago.

"Do not detain my envoy" are the words pinpointed on a tiny clay tablet that was discovered at the ruins of Ur, the legendary birthplace of Abraham, long revered by Christians, Moslems and Jews.

The site now is part of modern Iraq, just north of the Persian Gulf and close to the Iranian border.

"The inscription clearly was a warning against the forcible confinement of diplomatic personnel," says Michanowsky.

In the very same area where ancient people understood the importance of diplomatic immunity, Iranian militants of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4 and are still holding 50 Americans hostage.

All international appeals for their release have failed, including a ruling by the International Court of Justice at The Hague and a unanimous appeal by the UN Security Council urging Iran to release the Americans promptly.

Iranian revolutionary authorities also have been holding U.S. Charge d'affaires Bruce Laingen, the ranking American diplomat there, as well as two associates, as prisoners at another site.

The ancient Mesopotamian diplomatic message tracked down by Michanowsky was written in the cuneiform or wedge-shaped script — mankind's oldest — and is in the Akkadian language.

Cuneiform was invented by the Sumerians, an ancient mysterious people who eventually disappeared. However, their form of writing was adopted by various non-Sumerian-speaking people of Mesopotamia.

The 4,000-year-old envoy request appears on two of the few intact lines on an otherwise serously damaged Akkadian-language tablet.

The key words "la takallam" — do not detain — appear on the lower line. Takallam comes from "kalu," Michanowsky explains, a verb meaning "detain, keep in custody, forcibly confine."

The Akkadian diplomatic warning, in its entirety, reads:

"Maru Shipria la Takallam" — literally "My envoy do not detain."

Other cuneiform tablets from that area emphasize that the safety of diplomatic personnel is essential to peaceful and realistic relations between countries, Michanowsky points out.

He adds that, in a different context, the word kalu is also used to mean "hold back progress."

Cuneiform clay tablets eventually became the widely accepted means of diplomatic communication throughout the ancient world, the explorer says.

Difficult decade, with bright spots, facing Europe

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON (CP) — Prospects are for declining growth and rising unemployment as Europe contemplates the 1980s.

However, even in the face of daunting political, economic and social pressures, the future contains some signs of new opportunity.

Economists have pronounced the 1980s "the difficult decade" as Western Europe contemplates such problems as turmoil in Iran, threats to world oil supplies and the ever-increasing military power of the Soviet Union.

On the positive side, however, they note the return to democracy of Greece, Spain and Portugal, a move which will bring all three countries into the European Economic Community in the relatively near future.

And no matter what economic and political problems this will bring, it will create an occasion for all 12 countries to take a fresh look at where they are going.

On the economic front, the traditional industries of Western Europe are falling victim to competition from Japan and newly industrialized countries of the Third World and the Europeans have been slow to master the enormous process of adjustment.

In the political-military sphere, there is argument among the partners of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization on how best to deal with such problems as the Soviet challenge, the Greece-Turkey confrontation and the Lone-Hand Luke posture of France.

Uncertainty in both areas comes from the fact that the 1980s could be a period of sweeping political change.

Margaret Thatcher seems likely to occupy 10 Downing Street through the middle of the decade.

However, both President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany face difficult election campaigns during the next couple of years.

Giscard is under pressure from the Gaullists within his own ranks; Schmidt can expect a strong challenge from Franz-Josef Strauss on his right wing. Should the pre-1980s swing to the right continue in Europe, both could be in trouble.

The most recent elections in Britain and Portugal have shown clear evidence of this move to the right.

In Italy, the seemingly unstoppable advance of Eurocommunism has been turned.

Social democracy triumphed in Denmark, but throughout Scandinavia, British observers see a gentle groundswell gathering behind the forces of moderate conservatism.

The 1970s were supposed to be the decade to consolidate the lavish welfare programs set up during the 1960s, a task now bequeathed to the 1980s.

Few experts doubt that the EEC is in difficulty, even though the organization didn't collapse as the prosperous 1960s gave way to the harsher climate of the 1970s.

They see pressures within the community for a reappraisal and there is hope that a compromise can be found to resolve such problems as British reluctance to continue as EEC paymaster.

Mrs. Thatcher took the EEC to the brink on that one and stepped back just short of calling for British secession. However, left-wing politicians have been calling for British withdrawal for years.

Even should that hurdle be cleared, the EEC still will face a fundamental reassessment of its finances.

BUMPER STICKERS with anti-Iranian slogans were hot items in San Antonio, Texas, where John Rosen had set up business near city hall. Five Iranian students had earlier staged a sit-down hunger strike at the city hall, protesting the presence of the Shah of Iran at a nearby air force base.

Gas stockpiled?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major factor in the U.S. gasoline shortage last spring was a decision by American oil companies to build inventories rather than sell their products, says a report issued Sunday by the Brookings Institution.

But the report adds that the stockpiling from April through June may have been prudent because of "uncertainty about world supplies of crude oil for the second half of the year."

The report also suggests that several U.S. energy department policies encouraged the inventory building and contributed to a rapid rise in gasoline prices.

The report by economist Philip Verleger of Yale University is contained in Papers on Economic Activity published by the Brookings Institution. The institution is a non-profit research group based here that specializes in analysis of economic, government, foreign policy and social science issues.

Verleger reached his conclusions after comparing U.S. government data on refineries for the second quarter of 1979 to the second quarter of 1978.

A spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute, an oil-industry research group, challenged both the comparison and the conclusions.

"The root cause, when everything else is stripped away, was a shortage of crude oil" that resulted from a reduction in Iranian production during the revolution to overthrow the shah, said the spokesman.

He added that U.S. oil companies "built up inventories, particularly of heating oil, at the request of the federal government."

And he pointed out that 1978 might not be a valid year with which to compare 1979 refinery activity because oil companies in 1978 drew heavily from a surplus of inventories accumulated in 1977 in anticipation of a rise in foreign crude oil prices.

Verleger argues that in spite of the Iranian slowdown, crude oil imports by U.S. oil companies in the second quarter this year were higher than in the second quarter last year and more than made up for a decline in U.S. crude oil production.

Mountaineer has heard 'snowman'

SHREWSBURY, England (Reuter) — A British mountaineer just back from the Himalayas said Sunday he has firm evidence that the fabled Abominable Snowman exists.

John Edwards, leader of an expedition to Nepal, said he has photographs of the mysterious creature's footprints and he has heard its high-pitched scream.

"This has changed me from something of a skeptic into a realization that there is firm evidence of a strange creature in the Himalayas," Edwards said.

"One footprint we found was a really clear example and I think our pictures will prove to be the best taken yet."

Edwards said his expedition found the footprints in the remote Hinku Valley and brought back specimens of the creature's dung.

Many Nepalese are convinced that a shy, man-like creature they call the Yeti lives high in the Himalayas, but its existence has long been a subject of dispute among scientists and mountaineers.

South African scientist held in N-leak probe

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Police said today they are holding a South African scientist in connection with a leak of the country's nuclear secrets to anti-apartheid organizations in Britain and West Germany.

Renfrew Christie, a former student activist at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, who received a doctorate from Oxford University in England, was arrested Oct. 23 and held without being charged under the country's strict anti-terrorism laws.

Police sources said Christie passed the information to groups in Britain and West Germany who oppose the racial separation policies of South Africa. The groups were not identified.

Police said the scientist has not yet been formally charged with leaking the nuclear secrets but the investigation into his activities has been completed and his case forwarded to the attorney general.

They did not say what kind scientist he was or if his work involved nuclear research.

The police sources said Christie, 30, would probably be charged under the Atomic Energy Act which calls for a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment, a fine of $24,000 or both.

There is also a possibility that he could be charged with high treason, which carries the death penalty. The final charges will probably depend on the importance of information leaked and to whom it was given.

South Africa now has one nuclear power plant under construction at Koeberg in the Cape Province but the government has denied that it has already manufactured an explosive nuclear device.

In October the U.S. government questioned South Africa about an alleged nuclear explosion detected by a weather satellite somewhere in the Indian Ocean. The claim brought vehement denials from South Africa.

Idi Amin has left

PARIS (Reuter) — Deposed Ugandan dictator Idi Amin has left his exile in Libya, Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy said in an interview published hereby the newspaper Le Figaro.

Col. Khadafy did not say when Amin left or where he has gone, only that "he is no longer in Libya."

Amin fled to Libya earlier this year after Tanzanian forces helped Ugandan exiles take over Uganda.

Khadafy was asked by the newspaper how his proclaimed government of the masses could support such dictators as Amin and deposed Central African Emperor Bokassa.

"Firstly, I never supported them," the colonel said. "In Amin's case, I protected him because he was the first African leader to break relations with Israel. He also gave his support to the Palestinian cause."

Bombing in Rome

ROME (UPI) — Three bombs exploded in separate incidents in the heart of Rome, damaging buildings near the U.S. Embassy and the offices of Trans World Airlines.

There were no injuries reported in the bombings.

One of the blasts Sunday night damaged the metal doorway of the Air France office, opposite the American Embassy building on the Via Veneto. Windows in neighboring buildings were shattered.

The second blast occurred a short while later near the TWA offices on the Via Barberini.

A third device went off near the central railway station in a city-maintained facility for the homeless, but caused only minor damage.

Movie mogul Zanuck dead

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Darryl F. Zanuck was the last of Hollywood's flamboyant movie moguls. He ran 20th Century-Fox Studios with an iron hand for more than a third of a century.

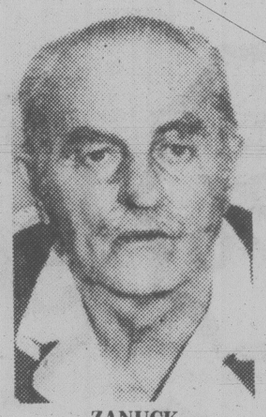
Ousted as studio board chairman in 1971, Zanuck thereafter suffered ill health in retirement at his Palm Springs home. He was hospitalized for pneumonia Oct. 28, 1979, and lapsed into a coma Nov. 17, a friend reported.

Zanuck died Saturday evening after suffering a stroke. He was 77.

The cigar-chomping, mustachioed Zanuck received as much publicity as any of his stars in a turbulent private life filled with extra-curricular romances, feuds and top-notch movies.

At one time, he was one of the highest salaried executives in the United States, earning more than $450,000 in salary and dividends.

At the height of his power he stunned a charity ball crowd at a Sunset Strip nightclub by removing his shirt and chinning himself on a circus trapeze.



ZANUCK

In later years, Zanuck made news by firing his son, Richard, as head of production at 20th Century-Fox in a dispute over control of the studio. Young Zanuck filed a $22.2 million suit against his father in 1971, complaining he was wrongly fired from the $300,000 a year post.

Top art collector Guggenheim dies

VENICE (AP) — Peggy Guggenheim, an expatriate U.S. millionaire who put together one of the world's greatest collections of modern art in a whirlwind of romances in Europe between the wars, died Sunday at 81.

She died in a hospital near Venice, the city she once said she "always loved more than any place on earth." She had recently suffered a stroke and was admitted to hospital Nov. 15 in Campo San Piero, near the lagoon city.

Mrs. Guggenheim, as she called herself, kept her collection at her 18th-century palazzo on the Grand Canal and threw it open to an admiring public.

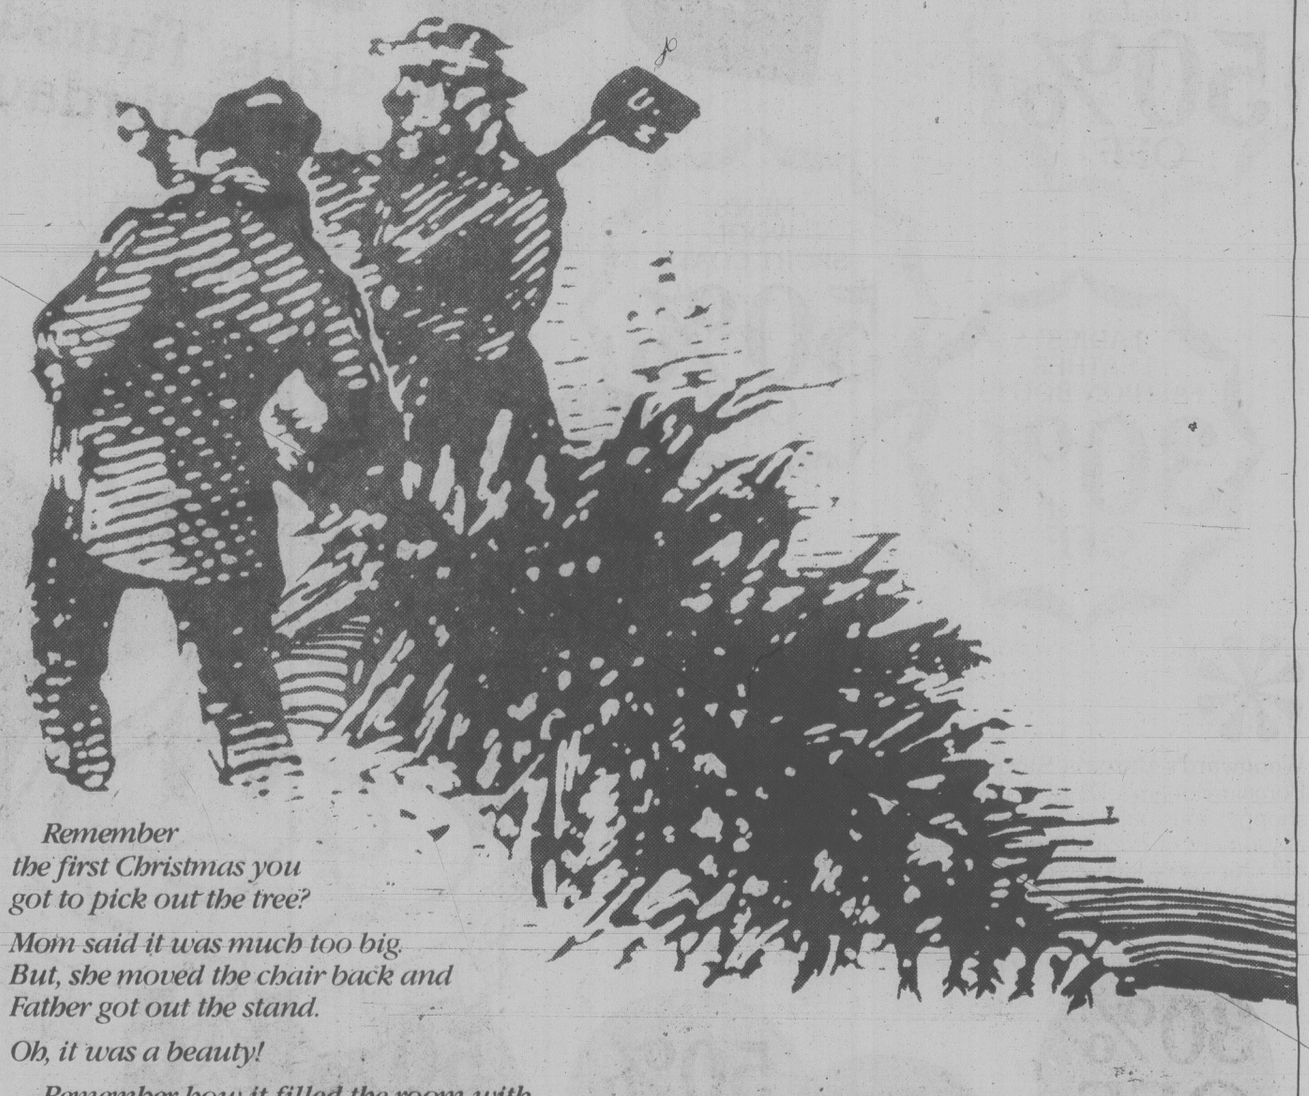
Her passion for art — her 266-piece collection was valued at $35 million — was matched in her personal life. She had four husbands — two of them artists and two of them writers. She also had celebrated romances with playwright Samuel Beckett and French painter Yves Tanguy.

The collection, embracing all major movements of 20th century art, included works by Picasso, Chagall, Dali, Pollock, Braque, De Chirico and Max Ernst, a German surrealist who was one of her four husbands.

Mrs. Guggenheim once said she had come upon collecting almost by accident. "It was after a divorce and someone said I should either start a publishing company or an art gallery," she said. "I figured I'd lose too much money in publishing, so I started a gallery."

Her first marriage to artist Laurence Vail, whom she once described as the "King of Bohemia," ended in divorce and a custody battle for their two children, Sindbad and Deirdre. She got Deirdre. Her other husbands included writers John Holms and Douglas Garmen and Ernst, a German refugee, whom she married in the U.S.

She opened a gallery in New York during the war, but afterward she returned to Europe and settled in Venice.



Remember
the first Christmas you got to pick out the tree?

Mom said it was much too big.
But, she moved the chair back and Father got out the stand.

Oh, it was a beauty!

Remember how it filled the room with a fresh, outdoors smell?
The Christmas oranges that made your mouth water... the little presents you'd saved for and worked so hard to make... the mysteriously wrapped packages.
How they all came out of their secret hiding places, the candles were lit...it was Christmas.

Remember?

We hope that this will be another very special Christmas for you and yours to remember.

Bloody brawls, deaths, familiar London disco scene

By PAUL MAJENDIE

LONDON (Reuter) — The disco music throbs, the strobe lights flash and suddenly angry looks are exchanged, fists fly, knives and broken bottles stab the air and the dance floor dissolves in bedlam.

It is an all too familiar scene in London discotheques — where eight young people have died this year and many others have been injured in bloody brawls.

City officials, determined to stop the wave of violent discomania, have worked out a tough new code of practice for disco owners, riding high on the dance craze that has produced one of Britain's fastest growing leisure industries.

The council's disco rules call on managers of the city's 1,000 discos to search clients for potential weapons at the entrance, using an electronic scanner if necessary.

Weapons used by teenagers in the "disco armory" have included bricks, knives, cut-throat razors and "afro" combs with sharpened teeth.

One veteran, showing his "afro" comb to a reporter taking a first-hand look at disco violence, explained his technique: "You try to hit them on the cheekbone, then tear it down across their faces. That leaves them with some nasty scars for life."

The council code also says security guards, commonly known in Britain as bouncers, should be over 18, have no criminal records and be able to look after themselves in difficulties.

The disc jockey up on his record-playing perch should also be able to play his part and "have the ability to 'read' the floor, spot early signs of violence and tone down the music to cool a potentially violent atmosphere."

Managers must watch carefully to see that teenagers under 18 are not allowed to drink.

Pounding music, pulsating lights, frenetic dancing and six pints of beer can make for an explosive cocktail.

Discos are an ideal for the modern-day peacock who can strut around parading his potency, showing his toughness and tempting the girls. But it does not always work out like that, and alcohol often has to act as an inadequate substitute.

"Drink is a compensation for their lack of success. For every John Travolta (star of the disco hit Saturday Night Fever), there are hundreds of failures at dancing and attracting girls," commented one reporter after touring 30 discos.

The code, now being distributed to all London discos, also suggests that managers should ensure there are equal numbers of men and women among the clientele, a proposal likely to be ignored by those discos which have special nights for homosexuals.

The code was produced after six months of consultatons with the police and disco owners, whose booming business is estimated to have an annual turnover of $400 million in Britain.

"When we find things are wrong, we lean quite heavily on the management — which has a lot at stake," says Bolton.

School administrators have banned a children's Christmas book because its Santa Claus has a negative attitude toward Christmas. Superintendent Bradley Henson of Holland, Mich., says the book, Father Christmas, traces Santa's routine and the problems he encounters, including bad weather and the difficulty of getting into a mobile home.

Sixty-three years ago, Mathilda Hermanson, of Garretson, S.D., ordered two Christmas dresses for her daughter and two dresses for herself from the Sears-Roebuck catalogue. The dresses arrived last month. The four dresses, still wrapped in the original packaging with sales tickets and spring sale catalogue intact, were found in the railway depot at Sherman, S.D., as it was torn down last fall. The package was sent to an antique shop, where a friend of the Hermanson's saw it. Three weeks ago, it found its way to the hands of Virginia Hermanson, daughter-in-law of the woman who ordered the dresses.

She doesn't know it yet, but this Christmas is going to be a lot happier than the last one for Donna Mae Hollis, bank robber. The 40-year-old Minneapolis mother of three had $6 in her pocket last Christmas and no presents for her children. So she robbed a Minneapolis bank of $1,400, which she used to buy presents. But she was caught and sentenced, on Aug. 17, to four years in the federal prison in Lexington, Ky., by U.S. District Judge Miles Lord. Now she is on her way back to Minneapolis and her family. Lord signed an order reducing her sentence to the time she has served.

The Christmas spirit is also alive and well in Ottawa. Four days ago, Georgina Gerlitz accidentally threw into the garbage $2,000 she had saved and borrowed for presents for her nieces and nephews. Three days of digging through tons of refuse in the cold and stench of a garbage dump by Gerlitz netted only $140 and a case of frostbite. However, news of her plight has prompted several Ottawa residents to show up at her door, amount of the lost cash in hand, in a bid to share the holiday spirit.

Ann Kiemel, who writes religious poetry, saysshe is spending the earnings from her books on a Christmas present for Boston kids. She's building them a gymnasium. Kiemel, 34, whose six slim volumes of simple verse have sold several million copies, says she gives away half of her gross income. This year, she is turning the basement of a shabby tenement in the Italian North End into a vestpocket gym for Boston children at a cost of $57,000.

Rosalynn Carter slipped out of the White House and traveled incognito to a discount store, where she bought $233 worth of Christmas gifts. "She got an awful lot done," said press aide Faith Collins. The first lady wore a brown raincoat and black boots when she went shopping at the Evans discount store in Rockville, Md.

Dear Abby:

I am a 47-year-old widow of 14 months, average build and personality — and a fun-loving person.

I am making the adjustment to widowhood very well, and am quite content and financially independent.

However, one area of my life continues to cause me pain and depression. My late husband was very affectionate, as I am, and I find I miss, as time passes, the thrill of being held, caressed and kissed.

I've joined some groups and am active in my church. I love a good time, and am not interested in a brief sexual encounter, but I have so much love to give and need the same.

How does a respectable woman go about meeting decent companions?

Hungry for Love

Dear Hungry:

You're on the right track. A respectable woman finds decent companions where decent people spend their time: at church-related activities, doing volunteer work, in adult education, sports, hobbies, involvement in the arts, civic affairs, politics, etc.

You say you are financially independent. You're lucky. That enables you to travel — a great way to make new contacts. (Don't focus on men exclusively; women have brothers, cousins and men friends, you know.)

Don't be reluctant to entertain and broaden your circle of friends. When you least expect it, you'll find a man who's as respectable — and hungry for love — as you are. Good luck.

Dear Abby:

I'm fat, employed and making an excellent salary. I do not have a thyroid problem or any physical disorders.

The woman who wrote to you complaining that she couldn't get a job because she was fat, was deceiving herself. She couldn't get a job, not because whe was fat, but because of the way she presented herself.

A woman who is fat can look wonderful by keeping herself clean, well-groomed and beautifully dressed.

I stopped trying to lose weight even though thin was in. Instead, I learned how to dress and look really attractive. A day doesn't go by that someone doesn't tell me I look good!

I work for a doctor who wants me to lose weight for health reasons, but I haven't missed a day's work in five years.

I feel that anyone who is overweight and unhappy should try to do something about it. But she shouldn't blame her being fat for her unhappiness. She can be fat and look terrific.

I work for an internist and my boyfriend is an attorney. I am 29, 65 pounds overweight, but I like me!

Fat and Happy

Dear F and H:

You make an excellent point. And I hope your letter stands better than a fat chance of reaching those who can learn from it.

Image of love shines again

By PAUL MINVIELLE

The concern and love of the father for his newborn son were obscured for 230 years.

Protected by a wooden case, the image survived wars, ocean crossings and fires and then, the love of a woman for the memory of her grandfather and the man who created it, brought it to light once more.

Technically it's an oil painting and it's now known it was done in 1749 by Paul Troger, an important but little-known 18th Century Austrian master.

His credentials are long and, to those who care about this sort of thing, impressive. And to appreciate what happened later, it helps to know a little about the painter.

He was born in Zell, Austria Oct. 30, 1698.

He studied under several masters in Venice, Rome, Naples and Bologna, returning to Vienna as a scenographer in 1728, later becoming director of the Vienna Academy.

Troger was widely known for his luminous ceiling paintings and as an influential teacher. His Baptism of Christ hangs in the Vatican.

One could spend a great deal of time speculating as what kind of man Troger was or the importance of his painting.

But this is a Christmas story, and, in its infinitesimal way, it has the elements of a miracle.

The beginnings of the story might take place in an Austrian monastery. It was only a family legend, but Karl Wimmer (or Charles, as he called himself in Canada) could have been involved in whatever plot removed it from said monastery, possibly with the aid of a nun.

Holy Family by Troger is on display at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria until Jan. 20.

But that, much like Wimmer's early days in Canada, are shrouded in mist.

Again, family recollections and traditions must be relied on for the story. The facts are few but fascinating.

Here then, with no claim to complete accuracy, is the story of Karl Wimmer and a painting that survived.

Wimmer was a kindhearted eccentric. Little is known of him — but the framework of his character is fascinating. He spoke several languages and apparently came from an aristocratic line. He seldom referred to his past life in Europe, becoming more mysterious as the years passed.

He was an engineer with Canadian National Railways in Saskatchewan for years, running the Carrot River line at the end of which the town of Wimmer was named after him.

He settled in Kamsack as a sometime merchant and hotel proprietor, moving his family to Saskatoon in the Forties.

His three children left home and married and Wimmer, alone, lived in an aging mansion on the banks of the South Saskatchewan River.

He was fond of gambling. Peter Veregin the elder of the Sons of Freedom sect was a crony.

Wimmer often paid the legal costs of defending Indians, and when he died in 1964 at about 84 years of age, members of the prairie Chinese community flocked in large numbers to his funeral.

The Troger painting was kept under a bed, just part of a hoard of personal papers and books. It was kept in a flat wooden hinged box — charred heavily as the result of a house-fire years before his death.

The painting itself was yellowed and dark with the dirt of age.

It was largely by chance that the painting escaped the fate of other paintings and books that were either thrown out or stolen after his death.

The painting came to Victoria in 1966 with Wimmer's daughter, Lillian, who gave it to her daughter Lorrie Wood in 1975.

Lorrie remembered her grandfather and the painting from her childhood days in Saskatoon. Anxious to preserve a little part of her family's heritage, she promptly began inquiring about the painting. It was to be almost nine years before she discovered the importance of the work.

Ironically, discovery of the painting's importance only deepened the mystery of her grandfather's background.

Her prime concern was to have the painting restored and hanging in her home.

Eventually she met up with Richard Beauchamp of the Conservation Division of the B.C. government. After studying photos of the piece in his office at the Curatorial Tower in Heritage Court, he directed her to Barbara Keyser of the Canadian Conservation Institute, Pacific Region Laboratory, in Vancouver's Old Post Office building.

Keyser, a paintings conservator of some 10 years experience, also examined the photographs and said the Institute, a division of the National Gallery, would be interested in examining the painting first hand. It was the spring of 1976.

The painting, meanwhile, was stored with nominal care under beds and in basements and garages as Lorrie and her husband Lon moved around Vancouver Island.

Finally, when living in Tofino, the painting was carted off to Vancouver and Keyser began the restoration or, more accurately, the conservation of the 230-year-old canvas.

Keyser soon sent a letter stating her eagerness to work on the painting.

The cost, she said, would be $600 — much less than cost of private preservation.

The work was painstaking, often done under microscope, square centimetre by square centimetre. The examination and treatment record read like a complex medical report.

Then, on April 13, 1977, another in the series of progress reports:

"Cleaning has brought about a dramatic improvement in the appearance of the picture," wrote Keyser. "Equally exciting, during the course of cleaning I found a signature and a date. The artist appears to be Paul Troger, quite an important 18th Century Austrian painter."

Speaking by phone from Ottawa late last Thursday, Keyser recapped her part in the preservation project:

"I wasn't really looking for a signature. Just in the normal course of varnish removal it was simply revealed.

"Was I surprised? Well, yes. I liked the painting and thought it was a nice painting but I really didn't expect to find that it was by a noted artist.

"The old stretcher was a mess, lined with terribly weak fabric. It had been in a fire — there was smoke on it. It was very, very dark and you couldn't see the painting. Underneath all that, the painting was in very good condition. There were very few losses of paint. Once it had been structurally consolidated and the discolored varnish removed, the painting was quite complete and basically in quite good condition."

Keyser's director, Ursus Dix, is a foremost authority on Baroque art and is now head of the Ottawa restoration branch.

Dix headed the Vancouver branch before it closed and was so moved by the quality of the discovery, he made the frame which now houses the Troger painting, for $65 — cost of materials only.

"It's really one of the most rewarding restoration jobs that I've ever done," said Keyser, who has worked on many valuable pieces — including some Emily Carrs.

Once the painting was discovered, it became obvious it was too valuable to place over a smokey fireplace.

"It's a living organism and must be protected from extremes of temperature and humidity," said Victoria gallery registrar Douglas Henderson.

Vancouver art dealer and Sotheby's agent Uno Langmann put a ballpark value of $15,000 to $20,000 dollars on the piece for insurance purposes and the National Gallery had the painting taken by jet to Ottawa.

In the nation's capital, the work was kept safely for a year, locked in storage.

The Etherington Gallery at Queens University considered taking the picture on loan but it was decided to recognize interest shown at the outset by Roger Boulet, director of the Victoria art gallery, which has taken the painting into its collection for care and occasional exhibition.

And now, in time for Christmas, and somehow keeping a little bit of Karl Wimmer's memory alive, the painting is part of the Christmas show of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, running until Jan. 20.

Times writer Audrey Johnson reviewed the show in her Friday column. Here, an excerpt:

"The single work which held me in awed and enthralled contemplation is a remarkable study that focuses on Joseph and the Christ Child. The color is rich, shimmering with life . . . The heads of man and child are close together, the furrowed face of Joseph filled with tenderness and care; the infant's head resting against his cheek — peaceful, half asleep, confident, bathed in soft radiance.

"The painting is a work of devotion and high craftsmanship that, apart from its religious content, captures completely the relationship between vulnerable infancy and caring age."

The gallery, at 1040 Moss St., is open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Thursday 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Antibiotics always chosen with care

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Are there some antibiotics that are stronger than others? I notice that my sister's doctor always prescribes a particular antibiotic and my own doctor a completely different one.

Mrs. V.M.

Dear Mrs. M.:

There is no such thing as strong, stronger, strongest in antibiotics. It is the amount and frequency with which an antibiotic is taken that determines its effectiveness in killing bacteria.

Antibiotics are not chosen at random by the doctor. By past experience, the doctor can suspect the bacteria that may be responsible for an infection. When there is any confusion or doubt about this, cultures are made from the site of the infection. Then the bacteria are "matched" against antibiotics that are known to specifically control their activity. By this method, the vulnerability of bacteria is determined and the chances of controlling the infection are greatly increased.

Antibiotics are manufactured under their generic names. They are also produced under trade names. With so many excellent ones on the market, it is pointless for you to compare the ones that are prescribed for you with the ones that are prescribed for your sister.

Even though your symptoms may be similar to those of your sister, the conditions for which each doctor prescribes may be totally different.

My eyes get very dry. Is there any help for this annoying problem?

Mr. S.S.

Dear Mr. S.:

An examination by an eye specialist is essential to rule out any underlying eye disease that may account for the dry eye. There are also some general systemic conditions which may reflect themselves in dry eyes.

Drugs, allergies or low-grade infection may also be responsible for your problem. If no one specific factor is found, there are "artificial tears" which you may find helpful. These new preparations were created to closely resemble normal tears in their fluid and mineral content.

Normally, tears act as a protection. Dry eyes must not be overlooked because they can be more susceptible to infection and to foreign bodies.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH . . . There seems to be a tendency to be careless about simple ankle sprains. Many times these sprains are shown to have an undisclosed fracture. Every ankle sprain should be investigated by the doctor — by X-ray if necessary — in order to be certain that a fracture is not overlooked.

Bell-Irvings' card list nearing 2,000 names elizabeth forbes

It's Christmas Eve!

The big tree at the entrance to Government House on Rockland Avenue is outlined in lights, just as shrubs and trees in front of many of your homes, are outlined tonight.

Lights shine from the windows. A decorated Christmas tree stands in the entrance hall.

Christmas cards, received by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Bell-Irving decorate mantels, tables and panelled walls, again just as they do in your homes.

There's a difference, of course.

Where you arranged perhaps a dozen, or at the most 30 to 50 cards, on your mantels and tables, in Government House you'd find about 1,300 on display.

During the past two weeks they've been arriving at the rate of 80 to 100 a day.

They are all shapes and sizes and they bear the greetings not only of those in high ranking positions but also of personal friends.

When cards arrived at your home, no doubt you entered the names of senders in some sort of Christmas record book as a help when next year's festive season rolls around.

And where cards had gone, or were going, from you to those addresses, you placed a little mark against the names.

The same routine, on a much larger scale, was followed in Government House.

According to the lieutenant-governor's secretary, Michael Roberts, each day as cards arrived they were opened and checked to make sure Government House greetings had been sent, or would be going out in return.

This was the responsibility of Beryl Cox, social secretary.

On her desk was a card index box in which she recorded every greeting received.

A special section in that box was kept solely for personal cards, many of them signed with just the first names.

Other sections were reserved for ambassadors, high commissioners, premiers, lieutenant-governors, mayors, heads of the armed services, members of the legislative assembly, the federal government, also for organizations and groups in which the lieutenant-governor or Mrs. Bell-Irving are patrons, and for some 30 Government House aides-de-camp, living throughout the province.

After checking and cross-checking, each day's arrivals were sorted into three personal and preference lots and then sent along to the lieutenant-governor and Mrs. Bell-Irving to look over and add last names where they were needed.

With this accomplished, the cards were ready to go up on mantels and tables, aroung the fireplaces and on the walls, under supervision of the head housekeeper, Miss Van Loon.

The sending of Government House greeting cards was also the responsibility of Beryl Cox.

That part of her Yuletide duties started early in November and as each card was signed, sealed, addressed and made ready for mailing she placed a mark beside the name in her card index box and added the year, in many instances to a list of years stretching back over a decade.

Cards sent to personal friends and to those made on their many tours, show the Bell-Irvings surrounded by all members of the Government House staff.

An official card, white with black lettering and with the British Columbia crest in gold, went out to the preference list.

"In all we mailed some 1,400 cards," Mrs. Cox says.

That number will soon be increased, she predicts, as the Bell-Irvings continue to travel throughout the province and make more and more friends.

"By another Christmas we night easily be sending 2,000 cards."

I wish I could give you a full description of the 1,300 on display in Government House. Many of them are outstanding in design and wording.

As it is, I've only room for a small sampling.

The card from Rideau Hall in Ottawa, showing an informal picture of Governor-General Ed Schreyer, his wife and their four young people.

Another family group on the card chosen by Premier William Davis of Ontario and signed Kathleen and Bill, Ian, Neil, Nancy, Cathy and Meg.

A delightful card with a picture of Pauline McGibbon, lieutenant-governor of Ontario and her husband, both in formal attire, and signed merely "Pauline and Don."

A winter scene typical of many places in the northern part of Alberta and signed by Franklin Lynch-Stanton, recently named lieutenant-governor of that province.

The pure white card with embossed crest and tied with red and white ribbons, from the Royal Canadian Legion, Pacific Command.

A couple of cards that measure 10 inches deep and about 13 inches wide, with soft, padded covers, one showing a typical snow scene and the other an arrangement of holly and other Christmas symbols, arrived at Government House. There were sent by two families of the Indian village of Ahousat. The Bell-Irvings met them at their home, just north of Tofino, during one of their tours.

And, on the piano in the drawing room, a small card showing three children kneeling on a sofa and looking out the window at Santa claus. It signed Phyllis Ross.

Postscript: After a hectic few weeks of travelling by helicopter to visit lighthouses along the British Columbia coast; of fulfilling promises to attend Christmas gatherings of various groups and organizations; of entertaining and being entertained, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Bell-Irving are spending Christmas at their country home on Pasley Island in Howe Sound.

They will enjoy the holiday there with three sons, their families and a first grandchild.

HAMILTON (CP) — Yes Virginia, there is a Santa Claus.

Contrary to advice that parents should never fabricate stories for the sake of their children, Hamilton authorities believe the folklore surrounding jolly old St. Nick serves a useful purpose in the maturating process.

Mary Blum-Devor, director and chief psychologist at the child and adolescent services of the Hamilton-Wentworth health unit, said the Santa Claus myth provides an enriching experience for children.

"I'm a firm believer in myths and fairy tales for children," she said. "They're at an age when they have rich fantasies.

"However there does come a point when you have to teach them about reality. Between five and seven comes a period of increasing disillusionment.

"It's part of the process of growing up."

She said parents should perpetuate the myth of Santa Claus until their children question the concept on their own, usually at six or seven years of age, after hearing different versions from someone outside the home.

"They'll come back and check it out for themselves. Then you can sit down and tell them it's only a story. That it's really daddy and mommy, who love you."

ALFREDA and DON JOSEPH, and BUZZ LORIMER

WISH THEIR CUSTOMERS AND FRIENDS A VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

Chrysanthemums for Christmas

Gardener Foon on an April morning
Stood with his boots in warm brown earth
While in his heart a dream was borning.
The wind that frolicked in madcap mirth
And tousled the bloom of the flowering plum
Sang of spring triumphant and winter dead,
But Foon's slow thoughts went plodding ahead
To the season of the chrysanthemum.

(For this is the old Victoria story . . .
Where a Chinese gardener drew his pay
Chrysanthemums in their burnished glory
Must welcome the guest on Christmas Day!)
Foon, like a tyrannous father-in-law
Came to me where I spaded borders:
He ruled me and mine with an iron paw,

And meekly I waited to learn his orders . . .

Blood-and-bone fertilizer he'd need,
Costing a fortune for half a sack,
And I was also to pay close heed
While he detailed the pots I must bring him back
Both large and small, of the finest clay
At a price that fair wafted my breath away.

I ventured to wonder aloud what comes:
Said Foon, "I grow you chrysanthemums."
He pricked out his plantlets row on row
And his mission in life was to help them grow.
Our children must not wander near
And our dog at his peril visited here!
Our untended lawn was a weedy mess,
But Foon the Gardener couldn't care less!

His earth-brown hands with their green, green thumbs
Were occupied with his chrysanthemums.
While the long blue days tumbled after each other
Foon tended his sprigs like an anxious mother.
He watered, he fed them on bone-and-blood,
Then with cruel kindness he nipped each bud
Save on every plant, a single one
That he left to swell in the August sun.
He fussed with his darlings through countless hours

While slowly their buds opened into flowers.
He gave those 'mums the love of his heart
And they rewarded him in good part
Each now in its pot standing straight and tall
With its proud head coloring up for fall.

December came with a touch of chill
And Foon cosseted his chrysanthemums still.
Then on Christmas Eve, with a gesture grand
He took our children each by a hand.

"Now," he declared to each wide-eyed mouse,
"We bring the chrysanthemums up to the house!"

Pot after pot he ranged by the door.
Then back he plodded to fetch up more . . .
Each pom-pom an opulent delight
In bronze and yellow and red and white,
All glowing bright as a wind-whipped ember
Through the rainy gloom of that deep December.

Ah! Long ago, and far away
And Foon has been gone for many a day,
But still we remember when Christmas comes
Foon and his gift of chrysanthemums.

Everybody - even Granny now buying wood stoves

By MICHAEL deCOURCY
New York Times

"Everybody and his grandmother are buying wood furnaces," said Carl Flink, director of Energy Testing Laboratory, an independent agency in Maine that tests wood-burning equipment. The numbers bear him out: 10 years ago the wood furnace industry was dead, but last year Americans spent $1 billion on wood furnaces, stoves and accessories. Wood is now the main source of heat in 5 per cent of American homes, according to industry estimates.

"Homeowners can save a lot of money with wood heat," Flink said. "But what surprises me is that wood furnaces are popular in places ... where a cord of wood costs $185. It's an uncertain world, and I guess people are looking for the security of a pile of wood."

Whether for security or economy, homeowners now have the option of supplementing their central heating systems with fairly sophisticated wood-tand coal-burning furnaces. The basic design of the solid fuel furnaces hasn't changed in 50 years, but the modern ones are much more efficient and convenient to use, thanks to automatic temperature controls.

Wood heaters can be used with any type of heating system and, like most conventional heaters, the wood furnace also provides domestic hot water. Typically, the wood furnace is installed adjacent to an existing furnace and the hot water lines and controls are united; a few stove-furnaces are attractively designed for use in a living room or a kitchen. Should the existing furnace be old and inefficient, homeowners can buy sleek combination furnaces, which include both a wood-and coal-burning furnace and an efficient oil or gas furnace.

Wood furnace prices range from $500 for a modified stove to more than $5,000 for a combination furnace with an automatic stoker.

As for economy, these multifuel furnaces can't be beat if an inexpensive supply of coal or wood is handy. Under ideal conditions, a ton of coal, a cord (or a ton) of wood and 200 gallons of oil will produce equal amounts of heat. That equivalency must be adjusted, however, to reflect the relative efficiencies of wood and coal burners (50 to 70 per cent) and those of oil and gas burners (up to 85 per cent). A rule of thumb is that unless wood and coal are readily available for less than $125 per ton or cord, it's cheaper to use oil at 85 cents a gallon; and unless wood and coal can be bought for less than $110 a ton or cord, it's cheaper to use natural gas at current prices.

But you don't have to live in a forest (seven acres yields a winter's supply of about five cords of wood) or next to a coal mine (six tons of anthracite) to reap substantial fuel savings. Homeowners who regularly use cheap wood or coal can cut their heating bills by more than 50 per cent.

For more information on wood furnaces and 51 manufacturers, the October issue of Blair & Ketchum's Country Journal has an excellent 13-page article devoted to the subject. The issue is available by sending $1.50 to the Country Journal, 205 Main Street, Brattleboro, Vt. 05301 (802) 257-1321. The October issue of Popular Mechanics, available in most libraries, also contains an informative article on multifuel furnaces.

Like Every Newborn
"The Lord is King, and hath put on glorious apparel; the Lord hath put on his apparel, and girded himself with strength:"
Like every newborn, he has come from very far.
His eyes are closed against the brilliance of the star.
So glorious is he, he goes to this immoderate length
To show his love for us, discarding power and strength
Girded for war, humility his mighty dress,
He moves into the battle wholly weaponless.

Christmas scrapbook

LONDON (CP) — It is written that snogging beneath the mistletoe is an old pagan fertility rite.

Therefore, before plunging headlong into the office party, it might be as well to check the premises for old pagans.

Where all this is written is in a book published here for the Christmas trade — a Christmas scrapbook, compiled by Elizabeth Walter.

Ms. Walter reveals that Silent Night, the popular German carol, was first performed in the little village of Oberndorf, near Salzburg, on Christmas eve 1818.

Franz Gruber, the church organist who wrote the music, handled the accompaniment on guitar because mice had put his regular instrument out of action.

Mincemeat dates from medieval times when it actually contained meat but nobody is sure whether all this was to improve the flavor of the meat or to act as a preservative.

Sarouelles: not your average pants

Sarouelles are not your average pants. They are pant fashions from centuries past when traffic along the trade route through Asia, the Middle East and Africa brought styles, each unique, but sharing similarities of cut. All combine what we all want, regardless of where we hail from, comfort and practicality.

If you aren't familiar with Folkwear Patterns, perhaps you should familiarize yourself with the ethnic fit. Ethnic and historical clothing are tailored differently from current fashion. The patterns are designed to reproduce the original fit, which in the absence of zippers, darts, and other devices the sewer of today is used to, can be very roomy. For some this is marvellous, others may wish to alter the pattern for a more contemporary look.

These quick and easy-to-sew pants are full and flowing — see the Turkish version at the left. They are gathered at the waist with a drawstring, and at the ankles with an elastic, and also feature roomy gussets at the inseam. For contrast, note the middle version from Africa. It is sized for men and women and has a drawstring waist and legs that taper to the ankle. The version at right comes from India and is gathered in the front above the thighs into a wide hip panel which rises to a drawstring waist. Shaped cuffs above the ankle are faced and traditionally finished with simple embroidery. Complete instructions and a choice of four designs are given in the Sarouelles Lore and Embroidery contained in the pattern. It also provides an opportunity to employ your quilting stitch designs and use the Soutache (sailor's trim), Rick Rack or other braid along the lines. Feathers, ropes and cables, or simple arcs made with the Quilter's Compass are all effective, as well as different colors of thread. Try gold embroidery thread or perle cotton on top of gently draping fabrics such as rayon challis, lightweight cotton or silk, wool or blends.

The lore of the Sarouelle pants is fascinating — the origins go back to the nomadic peoples of the Mongolian Steppes and other cold East Asian regions. They wore clothing made of fur and leather as weaving was as yet unknown, and wandered over vast regions in search of food and warmth. As they rode on horseback (circa 2500 B.C.) it was essential to have a garment which was comfortable, hence the pants. From there, one can trace their evolution through various countries, and many peoples . . . it is fascinating reading.

How do we use these pants today? Folkwear suggests Sarouelles for yoga or jobbing, or when made in finer fabrics, for work or evening wear. The shape of the tapered African style is flattering when worn with boots or high heels.The Turkish version is dressier, with much fuller versions that tie at the knee and blouse over the calf to the ground. It is the classic choice for belly dancers — now you can make a pair for practice. Most unique are the Indian pants; they are suitable for any formal or informal occasion. To round out your outfit, try the companion patterns: Navajo Blouse #120 or Chinese Jacket #114.

Patterns available: Folkwear Ethnic Pattern No. 119: Sarouelles — three versions of pants as described, complete patterns, lore and machine embroidery designs. $7.50.

Suggested accompaniments for above: #120 — Navajo Blouse — $7.00. #114 — Chinese Jacket — $7.00. Folkwear Pattern Catalogue, $1.20; Quilter's Compass — handy gadget for making arcs and circles for fancy designs for machine or hand stitchery. $1.70.

How to order: Send your name, address and postal code, along with a cheque or money order to: Hearthside Patterns, c/o Victoria Times, P.O. Box 9120, Station E, Edmonton, Alta. T5P 4K2.

Pass up the tarts for fruit, cheese

TORONTO (CP) — Pass up the mince tarts, shortbread and fruit cake in favor of a tangerine, dried fruit or a chunk of cheese, says Barbara Davis, a community nutritionist with the regional municipality of York.

Davis and her colleagues have drawn up a list of suggested alternatives to rich and fattening holiday foods.

For snacks, she says, use tangerines, mandarins, apples, nuts in the shell (because it takes time to eat them) and raw vegetable strips and slices.

"Watch for recipes for yummy dips made with yoghurt and cottage cheese," she says. Concentrate on home-made breads and muffins such as pumpkin, carrot, cranberry and pineapple, and bake fewer rich cakes and cookies.

When planning desserts, try creative alternatives to the calorie-laden puddings and pies, such as mincemeat souffle, pumpkin custard or cranberry sherbet.

For beverages that are different, she suggests hot cider with cinnamon, warm spiced cranberry punch or hot consomme laced with a touch of sherry.

Older flashlight or camera batteries will have more power to go if contacts are clean. If a dry cloth doesn't remove dirt on the metal contact end of the battery, try rubbing the surface with a soft eraser on a pencil.

A very Merry Christmas
From its beginning, Wilson's has been a family store, established by a family over a hundred years ago; and to this day it has kept that family atmosphere. As we reflect on the number of Christmases our store has been part of our community family scene, we feel a special warmth that goes deeper than words can convey. Our staff, many of whom have been with Wilson's for a long time, joins us in wishing you every good thing this holiday season.

Courses that seniors might go for

the fourth quarter

Recently I was invited to speak to university professors, from many Canadian colleges, interested in continuing education programs and to offer recommendations for new ideas for courses of particular interest to seniors. Afterwards I took part in a profitable panel discussion.

Here are some of the courses I suggested:

How To Do Research: In the magazine Writers' Digest, an author said that he has found seniors particularly helpful in providing background material and doing research for his articles. I can vouch for that. I have a number of readers who regularly send me the results of their reading, observations and library searching.

So I suggested a course in the techniques of research — how to use the various sources of information which are available, library science, etc.

How To Travel: A knowledgeable travel agent could conduct a course designed to make it easier and more fun and profitable for the older traveller. I have given you tips for senior sight-seeing in past columns and there is more that could be covered.

For example, the course might teach oldsters to qualify as couriers — as leaders and managers of conducted tours. There are a good many "retired" men and women doing this — seeing the world while getting paid for it (at least to the extent of free transportation, accommodation and meals).

Senior Sex: Whenever I write on this subject, a heavy mail results. If a course could be conducted by an appropriate specialist, I believe it would be a popular one. It is high time sexuality of our older citizens came out of the closet (it's about the only item left there). The very word "sex" may deter some seniors from publicly expressing their interest; schools might call the course "Emotional Health" or something similar. Associated with such a couse might be lectures on re-marriage — the pluses and minuses of this for the widow or widower.

Widows and Money: I continue to learn of distressful cases of widows left alone with little or no training in family finances — left by a husband who took care of all that sort of thing. A course by a banker, trust company official or similar lecturer could be valuable.

Nutrition: Adequate nourishment is a problem for some seniors. Established courses in such areas as home economics, domestic science, food administration, etc., could be adapted to provide lectures for older people covering cooking for one (or two), balanced diets on limited budgets and related topics.

Others: I also suggested expansion of such college courses as music and drama appreciation to include art galleries, museums, observatories, arboretums, etc. Where appropriate facilities are available courses might be offered in horticulture, landscaping, botany and so on. Seniors are great gardeners — often eager to learn more. A short course in how to organize and operate study and discussion groups (for continuing senior use outside academic walls) also might prove popular.

If seniors have further suggestions as to appropriate college courses for our age group, let me know.

Scrapbooks help speech

OTTAWA (CP) — Speech-handicapped children have been given a new means of communication through scrapbooks crammed full of photographs of animals, food, clothing and household objects. Made by a group of elderly citizens, the books help the youngsters communicate and broaden their understanding of the world around them.

It was 6 p.m., December 24th, 1879. And the first Henry Birks had wished his last customer a Merry Christmas.

As he closed the door of his little jewellery shop on Montreal's St. James Street, he reflected on his good fortune. The soft glow of the sperm oil lamps showed a well depleted stock.

He had had a good first Christmas season. Now he could look forward to enjoying Christmas Day at home with his wife and their three young sons.

A hundred Christmas Eves have passed since that night. More than 100 Birks stores now sparkle across the land, still Canadian owned and operated by direct descendants of the first Henry Birks.

With Christmas only a few carols away, we express our gratitude to our family of fine employees and to our larger family of customers who have, once again, given us a good Christmas season.

A Merry Christmas to all!

Christmas overcomes commercialism

By DENNIS HARPER
Canadian Press

Christmas, a day of gadgets, indigestion, music, worship and tradition, brings joy for some and loneliness for others.

And although critics decry its commercialism, Christmas remains a day of custom and tradition that survives price tags and tinsel.

Whether the day is celebrated by the 1,400 people in Twillingate, Nfld., the 1,200 folks in Iroquois, Ont., or the 2,100 residents in the village of Osoyoos, Christmas in small-town Canada is a day of tradition — plum pudding, turkey, Christmas stockings and carols.

Equally, Christmas is a day of cherished traditions among the two million people in both Toronto and Montreal, just as it is in Nova Scotia fishing villages and on the Saskatchewan flatlands.

The Sally Ann bands are playing their music in shopping centres in the hopes of stirring Christian charity, children are scrawling out their wish-lists for Santa and people everywhere are scrambling to get cards mailed, presents wrapped and cooking completed.

"Ooh, I saw a lot of good stuff," said Damian O'Regan, 8, of Toronto after a recent trip through the stores. "When is Christmas anyway?

"I know it's the 25th, but when is that?"

Swept up in the spirit of the season, consumers rebel against warnings of recession and pay $200 for video games, $50 for electronic wizards and a buck-and-a-half a pound for turkey.

Many municipalities have hung up Christmas decorations while some, such as energy-conscious Halifax, haven't.

Saskatchewan is preparing to celebrate its 75th anniversary in 1980 and because of it the Christmas-New Year's celebrations promise a special zeal.

Sleigh rides, community dances and concerts and nightclub parties will highlight holiday plans in many Saskatchewan communities and the Ritz Carleton Hotel in Regina has even decided to offer an 18-hour New Year's Eve party.

Naturally, police everywhere will step up patrols in an effort to get celebrants off the road and into beds at home before they wind up in beds in hospital.

Harry Forgie, the Winnipeg police traffic superintendent, says his department plans to run announcements cautioning against drinking and driving.

And one enterprising fellow in Hamilton has started a tow-a-drunk service for those who over-indulge during the season. For a $20 fee in the city, he'll tow your car home and give you a ride in the cab.

A Toronto real estate agent, asked for her impressions of Christmas and New Year's preparations, summed up the problem police and hosts both face:

"You can't have people in without them expecting a drink," she said. "And people always seem to appreciate a bottle more than something that's good for them, like a cheese tray."

True, perhaps, but children remain blissfully unaware of such problems and continue to squeal their delight at the sight of Santa perched on a throne at shopping centres from Vancouver to St. John's.

Bev Warwood, a 68-year-old retired security guard from Toronto, should know — he plays Santa Claus every year and knows how serious the children are when they plump down on his lap and whisper their dreams in his ear.

He recalls how he got his first Santa assignment in 1970:

"At the time I was depressed, had no ambition, and the mall manager asked me to be Santa to lift my spirits and get me active again," Warwood recalls.

"I'll always be thankful to him."

People anxious to return home to share the holiday excitement with family and friends have jammed reservation counters at airports, bus depots and train stations — all of them looking for a share of the excitement Warwood experiences each day with the children.

"It doesn't matter whether you go to North Bay, Calgary or Vancouver — all flights are jammed," says John Cavill of Air Canada.

Even some of those in penal institutions will go home for a few days.

Officials at the penitentiary in St. John's, for example, have agreed to let 54 of the 85 prisoners go home during the Christmas-New Year's period. Those who stay behind will get a special Christmas dinner and be entertained by choirs.

And, from among the 22 million people in Canada, there will be fathers who will strap on their skis and slide across the front lawn on Christmas Eve so that in the morning they can tell their children the marks were made when Santa's sleigh landed.

The glory of it is that the children will believe it's true.

I did.

Santa's home is in N.B.?

FREDERICTON (CP) — While some Canadians may have visions of Santa Claus slogging through the frozen arctic wasteland to harness his reindeer for their annual flight, 75-year-old Arthur Wightman knows better.

Wightman knows that Santa has his reindeer coralled and "keeps a little place for himself" nestled by the North Pole Stream deep in the wilderness of north central New Brunswick.

"He's getting them harnessed there now . . . It gives him a good head start to take off from New Brunswick instead of way up there in the North," Wightman explained.

It was a day just before the Christmas of 1964 and Wightman, then a cartographer, was trying to come up with names for a group of nine mountains that form an unusual horseshoe shape around the North Pole Mountain, one of the highest peaks in the northern New Brunswick interior.

As he studied photos of the mountains, the radio played the song Rudolph the Red Nose Reindeer, and all of a sudden it came "in a flash" to Wightman that the nine mountains should be named after Santa's eight tiny reindeer, plus the newcomer Rudolph.

"There's the North Pole Mountain in the middle . . . around it I put Santa's reindeer and when he's not using them, they're always there, put out to pasture so to speak and waiting to be called on," he said.

The job of mapping New Brunswick did not begin in earnest until after the Second World War and Wightman was called in to help co-ordinate the process. He did map-making from 1927 until his retirement in 1969.

Wightman has a sense of humor about the map business and admitted he occasionally became frolicsome when naming places because of the boredom of the job.

Man. labor seeks law change

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Federation of Labor (MFL) has asked the provincial government to change the law to make it easier for unions to organize.

The MFL said that in hearing certification applications, the Manitoba Labor Board should give top consideration to the number of workers who had joined the union at the time that the application was made.

Earlier this year, the board ordered some certification votes when some employees filed petitions objecting to the unions' application. Unions have accused management of promoting these petitions.

Historic building

FORT MACLEOD, Alta. (CP) — The only remaining courthouse built before Alberta became a province has been declared a provincial historic resource.

The 2½-storey brick courthouse in Fort Macleod was built in 1904, the year before Alberta became a province. The courthouse was constructed to serve the needs of what was then called the Northwest Territories.

Drink water tests

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Gerald Muirhead, MLA for Arm River and Progressive Conservative critic for the environment, has called for compulsory annual drinking water tests in Saskatchewan communities.

Muirhead made the call in an interview Thursday after a survey he conducted indicated many communities are unaware they can have their water tested.

Muirhead said drinking water is vital to good public health but many small communities are either unaware the tests are available or say they can not afford them.

He said the province should pay for the tests, which cost between $50 and $100.

Birthday parties

EDMONTON (CP) — Two hundred proposals for activities to celebrate Alberta's 75th anniversary next year have been approved by the Alberta government's 75th birthday commission.

The 200 were selected from more than 2,000 submissions to the province, commission officials said Friday.

The projects will be eligible for funding but no amounts were included in the list which the commission submitted to the Conservative caucus for further considerations.

Among the 200 are the second Canadian Hot Air Balloon Championships in Grande Prairie, a national convention of Girl Guides in Little Bow constituency, an international medical symposium in Edmonton, a book on Metis history, a film on the province's architectural heritage, and a tournament sponsored by the Edmonton Chess Club.

Coins donated

CALGARY (CP) — Two city collectors have given the University of Calgary's Nickle Arts Museum a collection which C. H. Orton, the museum's numismatic curator, called the finest collection of Canadian currency in existence.

The three-collection donation by A. J. Conn and his son Lionel includes a set of more than 100 U.S. $3 bills issued by private institutions ranging from major New York banks to pioneer railway and power companies.

The third set of currency consists of more than 100 gold and silver coins of the Byzantine Empire from the fourth century A.D. to the Middle Ages.

The Canadian collection praised by Orton consists of 93 specimen Canadian bank notes printed between 1837 and 1954. Orton said the collection surpasses in range and quality that of the Bank of Canada.

Operating surplus

EDMONTON (CP) — A record $14 million surplus in the city's 1979 operating budget could limit property taxes to seven per cent next year.

Mayor Cec Purves unveiled the 1980 $350 million operating budget at a news conference Thursday by calling it "the best Christmas present I could give the citizens."

Expenditures have increased by 15 per cent. But Purves gave the province's $239 million debt reduction grant credit for placing the city's finances in a good position.

Old trapper still full of life

HERB LAKE, Man. (CP) — At 71, pioneer trapper and prospector Jim Barton isn't ready to settle into retirement.

His latest project is a pyramid-shaped cabin on the east shore of Herb Lake, more than 600 kilometres north of Winnipeg.

Solidly constructed of timber and other materials salvaged from derelict buildings in a nearby mining ghost town, his new cabin is about 300 metres from the one that's served as his prospecting and trapping base since 1960.

Barton's life reads like a Jack London novel.

Born on a farm north of Beausejour, Man., he was sent out to neighbors to work for his keep from the age of eight.

"I learned to paddle my own canoe pretty early on in life."

Education was squeezed in between chores, but he was a quick learner, completing Grade 3 in two weeks at the age of 14.

He first went to Ontario, where for a few years he worked at logging, railroad construction, and as a stoker on Great Lakes freighters.

Then he moved to Alberta where he worked as a farmhand, trapped with Chipewayen Indians for 15 years, and at one point, opened a general store and trading post.

But after struggling to survive on $5 a month one winter, he took up the lonely life of prospecting over wide sections of the Northwest Territories.

In 1968 he was stranded for 50 days at Firth River on the Beaufort Sea, west of Inuvik, N. W. T. For 30 of those 50 days he was without food and for 15 days he was without fire.

His legs were frozen from the knees down when he finally heard the sound of a search plane and managed to get to his feet and attract the pilot's attention with a faint wave.

"I don't think I had more than one more day's life left in me," he said. "After all those days and nights of struggle to want to stay alive, I had made up my mind to sleep away."

At Inuvik General Hospital, he began the painful exercises necessary to bring circulation back to his legs.

"It was a tremendous day when the doctor came in and we both saw signs of blood running down to my feet."

He has been in the Herb Lake area since the mid-1950s.

Hot-water heating for whole town

MONROE, Utah (AP) — Before the hole, there wasn't much to be excited about in Monroe. Mostly, it was just known as the third-largest town in Sevier County.

But the hole is about to steam up the residents. It's the core of the first city-run geothermal-heating system in the United States and it is in the middle of central Utah's coal fields.

The geothermal well on a hillside east of town will enable many of Monroe's 2,000 residents to stop shovelling coal next winter and enjoy the benefits of the city-owned-and-operated project.

"It's something to be excited about," said Mayor Duane Nay. "It's exhilarating. The potential is mind-boggling."

University of Utah geologists studied Monroe's geothermal potential in 1976 and tipped off Terra Tek Inc., a Salt Lake City-based energy-consulting firm.

The federal energy department has sunk $900,000 into the geothermal well, and Nay said the town will need more to lay the pipe.

Bob Chappell, with the energy department in Idaho Falls, Idaho, says Monroe will get the money.

"We went into it with the knowledge there was a good possibility of overruns," Chappell said. So far, says Nay, increased costs of drilling, well pipe and wages have meant an overrun of more than $17,000.

But the process behind the project is simple, the mayor says: "We're just pulling it (hot water) out of the ground, stealing the heat from it and poking it back in the ground."

Roger Harrison, a New Zealander imported by Terra Tek to direct the project, said the system was to have been in operation this winter, but it will be next November at the earliest before it is on line.

Once the water 500 metres beneath the town starts flowing at a rate of about 600 gallons a minute, three schools, the city hall, two churches, a fire house and all the businesses and residences on Main Street will be able to hook into the system.

Later, a second well will be dug and the system expanded to include the whole town.

Mark Chatti said he expects to cut his heating bill by 75 per cent after an initial investment of $200 to $600 to convert to geothermal heat from coal. "It'll be a great thing. There's virtually no maintenance," he said.

The Sphinx gets a corset

CAIRO (AP) — Workmen are fashioning a new limestone corset for the Great Sphinx of Giza in an effort to combat the erosion that experts fear may one day topple the head of the 4,600-year-old marvel.

The problem is that the once-solid limestone from which the Sphinx was carved is slowly flaking away, said Zahi Hawass, an antiquities inspector at Giza, the Cairo suburb where the cat-like monument — a symbolic joining of man and the sun-god Ra — lies in eternal guard over the burial place of Egypt's ancient kings.

Erosion became a problem 50 years ago when the body of the 22-metre-high, 63-metre-long Sphinx was unearthed by archeologists, he said.

Laborers recently began swarming over the Sphinx, one of Egypt's most popular tourist attractions. Hawass said 600 limestone blocks will be laid along the sides of the Sphinx to act as a screen to ward off winds that slowly erode the original limestone.

"It is the most extensive repair work undertaken since the Greco-Roman period" when four new paws were added, said Hawass.

Hawass and Western archeologists familiar with the erosion problem agree that the stone shield is necessary but they question the timing of the project.

Samples of rock taken from the body of the Sphinx last year showed an unsually high salt content and Hawass said the salt appeared to be causing erosion, just as the wind, sun and industrial pollution were. The salt comes from ground water that is sucked up into the porus limestone body of the Sphinx.

The salt is believed to have caused the solid rock body of the monument to have separated from the protective block walls built in Roman times, most of which have fallen down and exposed the sides of the Sphinx.

Some archeologists believe the current project should be held up until the salt is flushed out. Otherwise the same thing will happen to the new shield, they fear.

The erosion of the Sphinx in extremely gradual, but one American archeologist said a visible change has taken place since the French unearthed the body in 1926.

While the threat is not likely to cause any immediate disaster, another archeologist said the neck of the Sphinx could be weakened to the point that the head, which weighs several tons, could come crashing down.

To prevent this, archaeologists injected a glue-like substance into the flaking rock in 1974 and Hawass said the treatments may be resumed as an extension of the current $40,000, three-month repair project.

The Sphinx lies at the bottom of a hill leading to the three great Pyramids. Hawass said the Pharaoh Chephren ordered it built to guard the royal cemetery.

Archeologists believe the yellowish limestone monument has been repaired a half-dozen times since it was first carved out of solid rock in an ancient quarry.

Labor rallies behind 'martyred' union leaders

TORONTO (CP) — Jail bars do not necessarily make jailbirds of those behind them. Sometimes they make heroes.

For union leaders Jean Claude Parrot and Sean O'Flynn, incurring the wrath of the law has brought union prestige and growing support for the causes that made them criminals.

"I don't want to be a martyr," said Parrot, who received a three-month jail sentence for defying parliamentary legislation ordering his 25,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers back to work in October, 1978.

But while he waits to hear whether the Supreme Court of Canada will hear his appeal of the sentence, he is using his time criss-crossing the country to explain his union's controversial performance and recruiting support from the Canadian Labor Congress.

And he is gaining support.

Congress president Dennis McDermott and the leaders of major CLC affiliates such as the steelworkers, auto workers and building trades unions still don't like Parrot.

But they are reluctantly concluding they can't continue to write off him and his postal union as irresponsible renegades without seriously damaging trade union solidarity.

"We are no longer considered just a bunch of radicals and an embarrassment," Parrot said in an interview. "We've won recognition that we are working in the best interest of our members, that we're part of the labor movement, and that we deserve some respect."

Like Parrot, O'Flynn, president of the Ontario Public Service Employees Union, is also carrying his jail sentence — 35 days for leading what he admitted was an illegal strike by 3,000 jail guards earlier this month — like a bouquet of flowers.

While he to waits to hear about an appeal, his 60,000-member union is rallying around him.

His members see his conviction for defying a court injunction against the strike as a symbol of everything they resent about a system in which the government dictates the rules of collective bargaining and stacks the decks in its favor.

"The vast majority is behind O'Flynn," said George Farquarson, a leader among Ontario transportation and communications ministry employees in Toronto.

"A few are saying the union shouldn't have broken the law, but even they think the government wasn't being fair. Others think that if we're ever going to get anywhere ourselves, we'll have to go the same as the guards."

George Sneyd, a union officer at a Toronto psychiatric hospital, agrees.

"Most members are saying the union's stand was courageous and highly commendable," he said. "There's no backlash here. People are quite proud of what happened."

The guards' three-day walkout was illegal because by law, as provincial employees, they are not allowed to strike.

But union leaders say the employees felt hemmed in — by being a minority in a bargaining category dominated by workers in psychiatric and retardation institutions and by seeing their wages slip to $5,000 a year less that those of the provincial police — and by seeing a royal commission study and then shelve their demands four years ago.

"We tried every kind of persuasion and got nowhere," said O'Flynn. "The pressure was building up, but the government people had their heads in the sand. It's taken an illegal strike to make them realize they have to change their approach.

"Our position is that the law banning strikes is crazy and should be done away with. It's a natural right of workers to withdraw their labor to make an employer listen.

"Unless the government changes its approach, it's certain there will be more confrontations and the union will support them."

Parrot said the increasing support for his union shows that labor is realizing that its traditional arsenal — collective bargaining, political lobbying and waiting for salvation from the NDP — isn't enough anymore.

"There are two tendencies within the labor movement," Parrot said. "According to one, the general climate is anti-union so we have to play it cool and look moderate and responsible.

"The other view is that employers are becoming more aggressive, putting us on the defensive and forcing us to fight just to keep what we have. That means we have to take an even greater responsibility to take a stand, even if that means confrontation.

"There's no use being apologetic about labor's image. We are what we are, and no matter what we do employers and the media will never give us a good image."

EARLY MORNING mist and stark silhouettes of leafless tree and lone horse cropping the frosty grass created bleak December scene near Esquimalt Lagoon. Times' John McKay took picture.

New clip nips shoplifters

CALGARY (CP) — Peter Mather, security manager for Eaton's stores in the city, said an electronic gadget that's looks like a plastic clothespin and is called an alligator clip is the ultimate anti-shoplifting device.

Eaton's here has been using the clips since February, Mather said in an interview. The result was "significant decrease in shrinkage (losses to shoplifting) and a considerable increase in arrests."

He said it costs the store about $200 a month to protect 10,000 items. Last year, Eaton's in Calgary lost about $60,000 in ready-to-wear clothing to shoplifters.

The clip can not be removed from clothing. Only a special machine at the cashier's counter can open its jaws.

Inside the 10-centimetre long clip is a device that sets off strategically located sensors.

Mather said the only problem with the system is that it's difficult to find the shoplifter mingling with a crowd of other people.

Roy Bota, group security manager for Sears, said the clips are "the ultimate," but Sears has to stick with other anti-shoplifting methods because its store exits allow 15 to 20 shoppers to come and go at a time, making it difficult to single out the guilty party.

Poll gave push for 2nd vote

MONTREAL (CP) — Le Devoir says it was a recent public-opinion poll that inspired the Parti Quebecois government to offer holding a second referendum if the province votes yes in the first one.

The Montreal daily says a poll conducted by Radio-Canada and the Centre de Research sur l'Opinion Publique was leaked to the government at least one week before the results were broadcast last Friday — in time for the government to modify the wording of its referendum question.

About 65 per cent of the people questioned in the poll said they favored a second "consultation" between the government and voters if Quebecers voted in the referendum next spring to give their government a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association with the rest of Canada.

Le Devoir says the poll pushed the PQ government to include the promise of a second referendum in the preamble to the first referendum question which asks for a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association.

The holding of a second referendum was not previously part of the government's referendum strategy and in fact is contrary to its white paper on sovereignty-association released last month.

Radio-Canada's information director, Marc Thibault, confirmed that the results of the poll were ready at least two weeks before being broadcast and acknowledged that the information could have been leaked to the government.

Chantecler dies, breed extinct

SASKATOON (CP) — The last known member of the only recognized Canadian breed of chicken recently died an inglorious death here.

The six-year-old rooster, last known survivor of the Chantecler breed, died at his residence at the University of Saskatchewan's department of animal and poultry science.

And he was not stuffed and presented to the nation as Dr. Roy Crawford of the department had intended. Instead, he was unceremoniously dumped in the university garbage.

While he believes the unnamed rooster was the last of its breed, Crawford has been conducting a cross-Canada search for possible remaining Chanteclers. But the search was fruitless.

Crawford said the breed was developed in the early 1900s by Cistercian monks at the Oka Agricultural Institute in Quebec. The Chanteclers were officially recognized in 1921.

Crawford said some hobbyists have birds that are being called Chanteclers but they are believed to be of recent cross-breed origin and completely unrelated to the originals.

New Loto kickoff set for Jan. 1

TORONTO (CP) — Super Loto, the Interprovincial Lottery Corporation's $10-a-ticket lottery game, begins Jan. 1, corporation president Marshall Pollock announced Friday.

The game offers players $1-million prizes each month and replaces Loto Canada, which ends Dec. 31 according to terms of a federal-provincial agreement.

Pollock said players have one chance in 500,000 of winning $1 million.

Proceeds from Super Loto in Ontario have been earmarked over the next three years for a variety of hospital projects.

'Ayatollah Ringo' leads a new revolution

TEHRAN (Reuter) — A tiny man with spindly legs and twinkling eyes, nicknamed Ayatollah Ringo, has launched a movement which he believes will revolutionize the Middle East.

Few Iranians took Hojatoleslam Mohammad Montazeri seriously when he announced he was raising a 10,000-strong volunteer force to fight against Israel in southern Lebanon.

Many remembered the pistol-packing escapades, inevitably ending in failure, which were his trademark and earned him his nickname.

Sheik Montazeri, 36, barely escaped arrest in June when he led a group of 500 armed followers to Tehran's Mehrabad Airport and tried to commandeer a plane to fly to Libya.

In another incident which made him part of the folklore of the Iranian revolution, Montazeri's bodyguards blocked the runway at Mehrabad until their leader was allowed to board a plane for London.

Iranian officials swore they would arrest him when he returned, but the long arm of the law recoiled in the face of 200 armed supporters who turned up at the airport to greet him.

After that, he played a cat-and-mouse game with authorities for several weeks, calling clandestine news conferences where he arrived disguised in a full-length woman's black chador veil and sneaked out before reporters were allowed to leave.

But as Iran's Islamic revolution took a radical turn this fall, Montazeri returned to the limelight and launched his Palestine crusade, causing a serious dilemma for the governing Revolutionary Council.

For unlike his previous adventures, the concept of a volunteer force to fight Zionism had the backing of Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Khomeini.

It was Khomeini who issued the call "Today Iran, Tomorrow Palestine" which Montazeri's Revolutionary Organization of the Islamic Iranian Masses took literally.

"Imam Khomeini knew about our movement from the start and gave it his blessing," Montazeri said in an interview. "Before the first group of volunteers left for Syria, they visited him in Qom and he wished them God's help."

The council could hardly allow itself to appear less revolutionary than Montazeri but it drew the line when the Imam demanded money to charter a plane and fly to Beirut.

Council spokesman Hassan Habibi, knowing the state airline Iran Air was refusing to fly the volunteers to Beirut because the Lebanese government would not let them land there, said the council would not finance the Palestine expedition.

Montazeri, branding the council as subservient to Zionism and U.S. imperialism, responded by organizing a national fund-raising drive.

Within days, the first 42 volunteers were off to Damascus to begin training in a Palestine Liberation Organization camp run by Al-Fatah guerrillas in Syria.

Arab diplomats in Teheran said Syria reluctantly accepted the volunteer force, although it did not like the idea, because it could not deny fellow Moslems the opportunity to fight against their common Zionist enemy.

If the volunteers had been denied permission to transit through Syria, the government of President Hafez al-Assad would have left itself open to charges of conspiring with the enemies of the Arab nation, the diplomats said.

The PLO itself has displayed a marked lack of enthusiasm for its Iranian reinforcements, telling Tehran pointedly that the Palestinians need political and economic support more than they need manpower.

Only Israel has remained largely unperturbed by the prospect of a few thousand Iranian fighters near its northern border. Israeli leaders said they would deal with the Iranians as a routine problem.

Montazeri was not deterred by the refusal of the Lebanese government, which he blamed on plotting Lebanese politicians in league with Israel.

"The Iranian revolution has started a new struggle in the world," he said. "It is the struggle between the oppressed, wretched masses and a small clique of guilty rulers."

Heartened by his success in sending the first 150 volunteers to Syria, Montazeri talked of opening new fronts in the battle against the Jewish state.

"South Lebanon is not the only place from which Palestine can be freed," he said. "The volunteer movement will not be limited to Lebanon."

His movement has a training camp on the northern fringe of Tehran, in a former school in the foothills of the snow-capped Elburz Mountains.

There, volunteers from several Iranian cities, notably Isfahan, receive rudimentary military training and are shown how to use standard weapons such as the U.S.-made M-3 rifle.

Montazeri, whose father Ayatollah Hossein-Ali Montazeri is the president of the Revolutionary Council, has led a cloak-and-dagger existence worthy of the best picaresque novel.

Arrested and tortured by SAVAK, the shah's secret police, for opposition activities during the shah's regime, he fled Iran twice and lived in a variety of Moslem countries.

He claims to have had 10 different passports and been jailed briefly at various times in Afghanistan, Pakistan, Dubai, Iraq, Syria and France.

Montazeri believes that his volunteers will change the balance of forces in Lebanon and inspire the country's Moslems to unite against Israel.

"We believe that Iranian tactics, the tactics which overthrew the shah, will give the Lebanese people strength," he said. "The people must decide, not their rulers."

Russians restore Iran links

TEHRAN (UPI) — The thousands of Russians who fled Iran during the Islamic revolution are returning daily in large numbers to profit from bolstered trade ties between the Soviet Union and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's government.

The return of the Russians coincides with the critical breakdown in American-Iranian relations over the Nov. 4 seizure of the U. S. Embassy and the holding of 50 American hostages.

With the United States boycotting Iranian oil and other business with Iran, the Soviet Union has stepped into the trade gap and is beginning to profit from the crisis.

The great majority of the estimated 4,000 Russians who were here during the reign of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi left along with other foreigners when the Islamic revolution toppled the Peacock Throne.

Now they are returning at a rate estimated by various imformed sources at several hundred a week.

That fact alone appeared to make it unlikely that the Soviet Union, which wields veto power in the Security Council, will agree to American plans for UN economic sanctions against Iran.

Most important to the Soviet Union, diplomats said, is the one million cubic feet of natural gas per day it imported from Iran's southern oilfields before the revolution.

Marijuana for cancer treatment no longer in doubt

By VICTOR COHN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The active chemical in marijuana has been proven highly effective in relieving the nausea and discomfort of cancer chemotherapy and should be offered to thousands of patients as soon as possible, according to a leading medical journal.

Two studies and an editorial in the Annals of Internal Medicine all conclude that the effectiveness of tetrahydrocannubinol (THC) is no longer in doubt, and the editorial says its use could save lives by helping patients continue use of the sometimes unplesant anti-cancer drugs. The Annals is the monthly journal of the American College of Physicians, the main organization of the country's specialists in internal medicine.

Some patients now buy and take illegal marijuana, and an even smaller number get it legally from their doctors on an experimental basis. But its wide use is still blocked by federal red tape and by a lack of of interest within in the drug industry in marketing a non-patentable, controversial drug, says the editorial's author, Dr. John Laszlo of Duke University.

Last May a federal interagency committee headed by Dr. Seymour Perry of the National Institutes of Health told the White House more studies were needed to prove THC's or marijuana's effectiveness.

Friday Perry said "a number of studies" are indeed indicating THC can help some patients, and the committee will "take another look" at the matter next month.

Meanwhile, complains Dr. Laszlo, both "reputable scientists and suffering patients believe the government is not helping them."

Marijuana has been studied for some years as a possible anti-nausea drug for chemotherapy patients. But until now results had been confusing, and there had been no studies large enough or well controlled enough, says Laszlo, to provide any really scientific proof of its effectiveness.

That proof has been provided, he said in an interview, by two reports summarized in the same medical journal and "a number of other reports about to appear" in other journals, "pointing in the same direction."

The general conclusions are that:

— Given in proper doses and, sometimes, several hours before chemotherapy, THC has proved more effective in most studies than prochlorperazine (Compazine), the main anti-nausea drug used today.

— This is especially true in younger patients, who may have had some experience with marijuana. It is not always true for older patients who object to any intoxicant or disorientation.

In a third study reported in the Annals, one at the Mayo Clinic, older patients found THC no more effective than prochlorperazine, and ofter complained of unpleasant side effects.

Duke doctors, on the other hand, gave THC to 41 cancer patients who were not helped at all by other drugs, with "suprisingly good results in more than two-thirds."

"To summarize," Laszlo said, "we can safely conclude that (THC can) clearly have a salutory effect on drug-induced nausea and vomiting."

A Food and Drug Administration official, Dr. Edward Tocus, agreed Friday that "it finally looks as though a number of well-done studies show" THC is "significantly more effective" than other drugs.

But the only doctors who can get any THC for their patients, Laszlo said, are a small number of "the most persistent investigators who will write research protocols and perservere" in getting special licences from federal and state drug enforcement agencies.

He urged the Justice Department's Drug Enforcement Agency to reclassify marijuana as a medically useful, rather than unproved, drug. Then, he said, FDA and the National Cancer Institute could at least provide it to registered doctors as a "short-term solution."

That would still get it to only a limited number of specialists who help NCI test drugs, Tocus said. What FDA needs, he said, is for some drug firm "to come forward and propose developing and marketing THC."

One problem, said Dr. Laszlo, is that several federal agencies and divisions — FDA, DEA, NCI and several others — have "pieces of the action" and it can "take forever to get them all to agree."

If this remains true, he wrote, "we will continue to have that problem of isolation of Washington President Carter recently decried."

'Fluoro' cancers to rise

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Warning that skin cancers will rise rapidly if the use of fluorocarbon propellants continues to rise and eat away the earth's ozone shield, the National Academy of Sciences has suggested that the United States put a tax on them and set up a quota system to limit their use.

In a 392-page report to the Environmental Protection Agency, the NAS noted that non-essential uses such as spray cans, have already been banned. It did not recommend extension of that ban because most of the remaining uses are too important. The chemicals are still used in refrigeration and air conditioning, in metal cleaning and drying.

"In eliminating the non-essential uses, the U.S. has dropped to where it now generates less than half the world's fluorocarbons," said Princeton University's Dr. John W. Tukey, chairman of the committee that wrote the report for the NAS. "If we could get the rest of the world to adopt the same ban, we might be able to make things a littler better."

But Tukey said that even if the entire world banned the spray can propellants, so many important uses for the chemicals have sprung up that the emissions of fluorocarbons to the atmosphere would equal today's levels in less than 10 years.

The NAS did not recommend regulatory actions against the fluorocarbons, mostly because EPA did not ask it to do so. Instead it drew up a range of options like taxes, quotas and alternate chemicals to cut down on the use of fluorocarbons.

If worldwide use of the chemicals technicly called chlorofluorocarbons, continues at today's rates, the NAS said, enough of these indestructible compounds will rise into the stratosphere to eat away by the end of the next century almost 20 percent of the ozone that protects the Earth.

The ultraviolet breaks up the chlorofluorocarbons into chlorine and flourine, the former of which attacks the zone (oxygen molecules containing three atoms instead of the usual two) and breaks it apart. While evidence so far suggests that the attack has not yet begun in earnest, the NAS believes that enough fluorocarbon will reach the stratosphere in the next few years to begin shrinking the ozone layer.

"The chlorofluorocarbons accumulate slowly and their products accumulate slowly," Princeton's Dr. Tukey said in sending the NAS report to EPA. "If our calculations are correct, we should see half their ultimate effect in 30 years."

China clamps down on births

PEKING (Reuter) — China failed to reach its goal of a birth rate of 10 per 1,000 population set for this year, the news agency Xinhua reported.

The agency said a meeting of family-planning workers from all over China was held in the western city of Chengdu recently to review work during the last year.

"Delegates were told that 4.36 million couples have pledged to have one-child families but that, even so, China's planned birth rate rate of 10 per 1,000 was surpassed," the agency said.

"For next year and 1981 a broader propaganda program is planned, together with better and safer contraceptive drugs and more research."

Vice-Premier Chen Muhua, who is in charge of the family-planning program, told the meeting that the Chinese people should "stop worrying that family planning will result in too high a proportion of old people and too few people in the work force."

China has introduced a whole range of tough measures recently in an effort to bring down the birth rate, including economic penalties for couples who insist on having more than two children.

Mormon expulsion 'not for ERA'

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Two high-ranking Mormon women say feminist Sonia Johnson wasn't excommunicated because she lobbied for the Equal Rights Amendment — but because she attacked the leaders and doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Barbara Smith, president of the 1.5 million-member Mormon Relief Society, and Elaine Cannon, president of the 275,000-member Young Women's Organization, said disagreement with the church's position on the ERA is not grounds for excommunication.

"I think she (Mrs. Johnson) is trying to promote a cause by making the church look like it has an attitude of uncaring or indifference to women," said Mrs. Smith. "That just isn't true."

"The difference between Mrs. Johnson and some of my friends who support the ERA and are still members of the church, is that they aren't tearing down the prophet, the church and its policies," said Mrs. Cannon.

"I would think there would be nothing wrong in lobbying for it ... if you don't drag the church into it," she added.

But both women said in separate interviews they could not support the amendment and they will continue advising members of their respective organizations to oppose it on grounds it would lead to a breakdown in traditional family life.

Mrs. Johnson, a fifth-generation Mormon from Sterling, Va., who founded Mormons for ERA, was excommunicated from the church Dec. 5. Her ward bishop (parish leader), Larry H. Willis, said she asked people to turn away Mormon missionaries, had taught that church leaders hated women and told people the Mormons were trying to impose their morals on all Americans.

All of the alleged offences were in connection with her ERA campaign.

Mormon President Kimball Spencer W. Kimball has issued several statements condemning the ERA as a threat to the family. Mormons believe Kimball is a "living prophet" and acts as God's spokesman on earth.

Both LDS women's leaders said the church does not try to force its members to think a certain way, but attempts to "teach correct principles and let the people govern themselves." It's up to each member to decide whether to accept Kimball's teachings.

"But it seems very clear to me," said Mrs. Cannon, "that the Rotary Club wouldn't put up with a member who went around and said the Rotary is crazy. I think the criticism that was leveled at the institutions and people we hold sacred were in very poor taste. I don't think its a nice way to fight even a political battle."

Mrs. Cannon, who directs programs for Mormon girls ages 12-18, said Mormon women are free to make a choice about ERA. But she said they should look at why Kimball opposes it and remember that the church believes he receives divine guidance.

Mrs. Smith said, "We still feel very strongly that it (ERA) will promote a unisex society, and encourage homosexual and lesbian activities.

"We still feel it will invite all kinds of conflicts between husbands and wives. It will encourage a power struggle that will make the family structure as we now know it a very difficult structure, instead of one that can encourage people to work together."

"The traditional family with a father and mother and children is the thing that has made America great," Mrs. Smith added. "We simply can't decide that the traditional family is not the basic unit of society."

Mrs. Cannon said the International Women's Year Conference two years ago in Texas added to her conviction that the ERA should be opposed. She attended the conference as part of a delegation from Utah that was dominated by Mormon women.

"The Houston conference was absolutely overrun by lesbians," she said. "You say,'How do you know?' — Because they wore their badges and they wore their ribbons around their arms saying 'I am a lesbian, ask me about lesbian rights."

Mrs. Smith is the mother of seven children and has 23 grandchildren. Mrs. Cannon is the mother of six children. She is also a former newspaper reporter who has worked and kept house for most of the 36 years she has been married.

Year of Child 'a cruel joke'

NEW DELHI (UPI) — The Indian Express newspaper said in an editorial the Year of the Child proclaimed by the United Nations has turned out to be "a cruel joke."

The year has "produced nothing to ... bring into children's lives any of the good and great things that political theoreticians in India and elsewhere had promised them at the beginning of 1979," said the editorial.

"In this year as last and the year before, 15 of 100 children born every minute in developing countries did not live to see their first birthday.

"The statistics for India are even more staggering. As many as 90 percent of our children suffer from malnutrition, which kill more than 100,000 of them every month, month after month," it said.

The editorial assailed national and international agencies for "using the International Year of the Child as an excuse for inaction."

"On the most basic question of hunger, for instance, it is not the question of short-[illegible] supply. To quote a UNICEF report, 'The key question is not only how much food is available but whose land is growing what food for what purpose and for whose benefit.'"

Shortage, not OPEC, the real oil price villain

By LINDA GRANT
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Ever since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries jolted the world six years ago with a painful quadrupling in crude-oil prices, many people in the United States have cherished a notion that if the cartel could be smashed, oil prices might drift back toward old levels.

But oil analysts who specialize in international trends said Thursday that such a simplistic fantasy should be punctured by this week's meeting in Caracas, Venezuela, where ministers from OPEC nations were unable to agree on an official price for their commodity.

No longer is OPEC artificially boosting world oil prices, as it did in 1974, analysts said. While temporary periods of surplus will undoubtedly occur in the future possibly as early as next year, the long-term outlook is for increasingly tight oil supplies. This prospect is expected to be sufficient to keep oil prices high for the foreseeable future, even without a cartel.

"OPEC meetings get an incredible amount of publicity," said Richard Nehring, oil analyst with the Rand Corp., "because people think they set the price. To some degree that's the case, but OPEC's role is overstated. The factor really driving the market is the long-term depletion of cheap, conventional oil. We will continue to see high prices until energy is used more efficiently and we develop new sources of supply."

Oil analysts rejected suggestions that OPEC's inability to reach agreement indicated that the cartel might be breaking up. "That idea is kind of romantic," said Henry D. Jacoby, director of the Center for Economic Policy Research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, "but it's wrong. The cartel has not broken up in any sense. If the world returns to (a temporary) excess supply situation, OPEC will get its act back together."

Economists explained that the traditional function of a cartel has been to cope with problems of excess supply in order to ensure that markets are kept tight enough to support prices above their real market value.

In the three decades immediately after the Second World War, the world enjoyed an excess of oil-producing capacity. As a result, the U.S. and other industrial economies were built on cheap and abundant oil, more and more of it imported. But when the Arab embargo abruptly created the shortages of 1973-74, OPEC was able to push through those wrenching price increases. And even after supplies were restored, the cartel was able to keep prices up.

For the next four years, the cartel was satisfied to hold on to these gains. It imposed periodic price increases, but the increases were modest, below the over-all rate of world inflation.

Last year's revolution in Iran once again abruptly shifted market forces by causing a sudden drop in world supplies.

"When we lost about 2 million barrels a day of production from Iran, that became an indication that the price of oil should be higher," an economist with one New York bank said. OPEC reacted to the changed conditions, announcing three big price hikes last December, March and June.

With the third increase, OPEC froze its official prices for the rest of the year. But for the first time, individual OPEC members found that they could charge more for their oil than the cartel had agreed upon. Some began doing just that, while others, most notably Saudi Arabia, respected the OPEC ceilings.

Some analysts have contended therefore, that it might now be in the U.S. interest to have the cartel continue, because for much of the 1980s, it could serve as a price moderator. Only if the cartel got in the business of generating massive reductions in output — as some of its more militant members desire — would its activities be damaging, these analysts contended.

In the short run, most analysts expect world demand for oil to weaken in the coming year, as industrialized nations struggle with economic recession, and as conservation efforts triggered by higher oil prices translate into lower consumption.

Thus analysts are now asking how the cartel will respond to this anticipated — although temporary — oversupply.

Said Jacoby of MIT: "What was decided in Caracas this week is not all that important. The important issue is what will happen to Saudi Arabian production and the production of other core countries in the cartel in the next six to eight months."

Jacoby and others pointed out that if OPEC countries continued to produce oil at current levels, spot market prices should drop, the OPEC "hawks" would undoubtedly be forced to lower their prices closer to Saudi Arabia's more moderate $24 a barrel, and reasonable order could be restored to markets.

Frantic hunt for more oil

By JAMES NELSON GOODSELL
Christian Science Monitor

A mad scramble for new oil sources is under way throughout the Western Hemisphere.

From Alaska to Tierra del Fuego, wildcatters and state-owned oil companies alike are probing mountains and plains, swampy tar belts and deep ocean waters, for the "black gold" that geologists say lies hidden beneath the hemisphere's surface.

The result is a number of new finds — particularly in Mexico and Venezuela. If these prove as large as the higher estimates suggest, they would bring those two Latin nations into the same oil league as Saudi Arabia.

But the reserves, although promising, are not yet proven on that huge a scale. Mexico and Venezuela remain for the time being, therefore, more on a par with middle-level producers such as Nigeria and Kuwait.

— Mexico's oil riches in southeastern Chiapas and Tabasco states, as well as offshore in the nearby Bay of Campeche, have catapulted that country into first rank among hemisphere producers during the past five years. But new finds in Vera Cruz state east of Mexico City, as well as small but impressive new wells in northern Chihuahua and Coahuila states, suggest that Mexico may well be, as a Mexican oil geologist says, "sitting astride one of the world's greatest seas of oil."

— Venezuela long has been concerned that its present oil wells will run dry in 18 years or so. This led to regular cutbacks in production to stretch out the reserves for several more years. But concern has been ameliorated somewhat by the prodigious, untapped wealth of the Orinoco River Basin tar belt. Technological developments make access to tar-belt oil more possible now, and huge quantities of oil have been discovered near and beneath the tar belt.

All this suggests that the world, facing an energy crisis, is not so petroleum poor as many have suggested. But neither Mexico nor Venezuela appears eager to boost production to meet world demand, or even U.S. demand. Instead, both want to keep their production levels hovering at the 2.5 million barrel daily total. They do not offer any instant oil salvation for the United States.

Also offsetting enthusiasm about the Mexican and Venezuelan finds is the continuing inadequacy of oil sources in most other Latin American countries — and the steady drain that imported oil takes on the economies of more than half the countries of the hemisphere.

Brazil is the major case in point. More than 85 percent of its oil must be imported at a cost of close to $9 billion this year alone. That import bill eats up Brazil's foreign-exchange earnings and underscores the country's desperate quest for domestic crude.

That quest has led Petrobras, Brazil's state-owned oil company, to spend more than $1.4 billion this year on oil exploration and to open the waters of the South Atlantic to U.S. oil firms to carry on exploratory drilling.

So far, this drilling has yielded only marginal results, but oil geologists who used to say that Brazil simply did not have oil are revising their estimates, saying it is possible that there may be "substantial oil off the coast," as one recent report stated.

To date, however, this lack of domestic oil is the potential Achilles' heel of Brazil's economic expansion. The one offsetting factor is Brazil's development of massive hydroelectric projects on its vast river system.

For Brazil's industrial southland, the hydroelectric network is a major boon, as is the development of gasohol, an alcohol-derivative fuel for vehicles that is propelling about 20 percent of Brazil's motorized transport. But basic petroleum needs cannot be entirely offset by such developments. Brazilians say they simply must find domestic oil if their economic growth is to go ahead.

If that is true for a giant like Brazil, it is equally true for smaller countries.

Take Costa Rica, for example: Its oil-import bill is close to $150 million yearly and rising with each escalation of the OPEC-dominated price.

Costa Rica's oil shortage is akin to that of much of the rest of Central America, the Caribbean and parts of South America.

Only Argentina, Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Trinidad and Tobago, along with Mexico and Venezuela, are self-sufficient in oil. Of these, Argentina, Colombia and Peru are just barely so, but Argentina, like Brazil, is rich in hydroelectric potential and has begun a major nuclear-energy plan as well.

For the remainder of Latin America, oil imports are the order of the day.

Yet the discoveries being reported in Mexico and Venezuela provide a ray of hope to other Latin American countries that they, too, may be similarly blessed. Some confusion over the size of the new Venezuelan finds has developed, but they are extensive, perhaps more than 50 billion barrels.

On the other hand, new Mexican finds in the Vera Cruz area and along the U.S. border suggest that Pemex, Mexico's state-owned oil company, soon may push its known reserved total to something around 100 billion barrels.

World oil specialists caution, however, that countries use different formulas for calculating their reserves--that Mexico includes natural gas as part of its total, while other nations do not, so care must be used with these statistics. But there is no doubt in oil circles that Mexico's oil wealth is prodigious. It has moved Mexico in five years from an oil-short nation to the position of a major factor in the world oil market.

Mr. Bill, mutilated star, 10 cm. of playdough

Associated Press

He has blond hair and blue eyes, but you'd never call him as a TV star. He's shorter than Dick Cavett. His voice is higher than Wayne Newton's. And he's antisocial. Every time he meets someone on his show, he gets bent out of shape.

Yet on most Saturday nights when the TV announcer says, "Hey, kids, it's time for The Mr. Bill Show, a 10-centimetre lump of playdough becomes an entertainment giant.

Mr. Bill is a star. Fan mail pours in every week. His face adorns T-shirts and his recently published biography is selling briskly. He's even become a movie star — the semi-redeeming social value in Mr. Mike's Mondo Video."

Mr. Bill, who appears on Saturday Night Live, is a classic survivor of the '70s. Every episode of his show brings new cruelties to the wee fellow and his lumpy dog, Spot. He is decapitated, crushed, bent. spindled. But mostly mutilated.

With each new mini-disaster, Mr. Bill's star rises while Walter Williams, the shaper of his character, tries harder to avoid the public eye.

He doesn't even like to have his picture taken. "It's just nice to see Mr. Bill and think that's all there is to it. That's the important thing.

"The show is just a combination of the environments I was brought up in — Tom and Jerry cartoons possibly. It's hard to say what influenced The Mr. Bill Show and what it really is. I'm just trying to make it funny."

Born and raised in New Orleans, Williams went to the city university there and began to perform comedy. At age 21, he borrowed a super 8 camera and began to make comedy films to incorporate into a nightclub act. He also produced local TV specials and was host of a local talk show while he waited for his break.

It came during Saturay Night Live's first season, when the show announced a home-movie contest. Mr. Bill, Williams' 10th cinematic effort, was being made then.

"The idea was pretty much based on my dissatisfaction with the way my animation had been going. I started out with really fluid animation and continually worked to get very, very little movement at all.

"Then all of a sudden the next step was actually seeing hands move the little character. That, combined by my playing with playdough and making a little character, was the premise for the first Mr. Bill Show. Everything else has come from that."

Williams describes his first Mr. Bill Show as crude, but he says he was "crazy enough to think I had a chance in the contest. I liked some of my other stuff, too, but Mr. Bill was the only thing to get on, and that's what everybody knows me for now."

After Mr. Bill's national TV debut in 1976, Williams was encouraged enough to try to sell more episodes to the program. Two aired the second season, and another pair the next year. Mr. Bill has become a regular feature since then, slowly turning a cult into a craze.

For all his success, Williams says he can't explain Mr. Bill's popularity: "I just try to make the shows as best I can, always trying to improve and stay ahead of the audience and not let them down. I'm sure a lot of people feel this way about their work. I'm just lucky to have succeeded this long."

U.S. TV firm slates BBC on cable band

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — A new television service featuring all-British programming — primarily entertainment series rarely seen in the United States — will be offered to cable television operators beginning next spring, reports Time-Life Films, the exclusive U.S. distributor of British Broadcasting Corp. productions.

The service, to be called BBC In America, will operate from 8 to 11 p.m. every night of the week, although only Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday will feature first-run programming. The lineup on Monday, Wednesday and Friday will be a repeat of the previous night's schedule.

The company envisions running about six minutes of commercials per hour, but all of it would be seen between programs rather than in the middle of them, said E. Thayer Bigelow, vice president and general manager of cable operations for the new Time-Life Satellite Network.

Fresh off the drawing board, the service doesn't yet have any cable companies or advertisers lined up, Bigelow said in a telephone interview from New York. But the company is confident it will sign up enough of each to warrant going ahead on schedule, he added.

Bruce Paisner, president of Time-Life Films, said in a news release that the cable programming will be selected from the more than 5,000 hours of TV production that that BBC does each year.

"We particularly will be looking for very commerical, highly popular sit-coms and action-adventure series that play on BBC-1, the BBC's major network," he said.

Thai program feeds children

BANGKOK (AP) — Thailand has begun a national program to feed "the hungry child," following a report that one-out-of-seven Thai children younger than five suffers from malnutrition and 55,000 starved to death in a single year. The report, based on statistics for 1974, was compiled by Mahidol University's Institute of Nutrition. It attributed the high death toll to poverty in rural areas and lack of knowledge about child care.

Exorcist star feels picked on in drug charge

scott's world
by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Linda Blair, who at 13 played a girl possessed by the devil in "The Exorcist," is 20 now and has survived her own legal exorcism on drug charges.

Last September a Jacksonville, Fla., federal judge sentenced Linda to three years probation for a 1977 drug bust. She was ordered to make a dozen public appearances to warn young people to stay away from drugs.

Linda, who pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charge of conspiracy to possess cocaine, also was fined $5,000.

The young actress sounds as if she thinks she took a bum rap.

"I took that tumble because I'm famous," Linda said. "Being on probation means I have to notify Los Angeles county authorities every time I leave to go anyplace — and I move around often.

"I've got to give four speeches a year to kids for the next three years. I haven't done any of them yet and I'm not looking forward to it.

"I get uncomfortable when I have to speak to a group of people, you know? But they wanted someone to set an example — and I guess that's me.

"Fame is what caused the drug bust. I was only convicted of conspiracy and that can mean almost anything.

"The bust may have hurt my career because people assumed that I was all screwed up. The arrest and the publicity hurt my pride. I was 18 when it all happened and it hurt my family, too.

"I like life too much to get involved with drugs."

Linda, blonde and full-figured, still has the pert, cute face of the youngster she chillingly portrayed in "The Exorcist."

Since her 1973 nomination for best supporting actress (losing to Tatum O'Neal in "Paper Moon"), Linda has appeared in 10 feature films and TV movies.

She reprised her role of the demonically possessed child, Regan, in "The Heretic" and shone in a pair of highly-rated, highly-praised TV movies, "Born Innocent" and "Sarah T.: Portrait of a Teen-age Alcoholic."

Linda also appeared in "Airport '75." But in the last couple of years her assignments have been several cuts below "The Exorcist."

She starred in the movie "Wild Horse Hank" last year. It has yet to be released. She also stars in "Roller Boogie," due for release this month, and the recently completed "Ruckus."

Linda temporarily is living in the San Fernando Valley but still owns a home in Wilton, Conn. She brought her four horses to California to ride and train during breaks in her movie activity.

No shrinking violet nor blushing innocent, Linda is a knowledgeable young woman who boasts of making her own decisions and going her own way for the past four or five years.

She lives with a stuntwoman friend in an apartment and is in the process of patching up an on-again-off-again romance with a traveling musician.

She hasn't been married but lived with her musician friend until last summer.

"My boyfriend is always on the road and I've been busy in movies," she said. "We are both involved with our careers and are being pulled on individually by our work and friends. But we'll get it together soon, I hope.

"I never really cared about acting, maybe because I've been doing it since I was a kid. But I put my best into each performance and I enjoy working with good people.

"What I really don't like is the fame and the celebrity. You lose all your privacy and people pull on you. But I've brought myself this far and I'll try to maintain my high level of responsibility."

Linda says she has tried to organize her life to enable her to work in a couple of movies a year in order to take off every other year to devote to horse shows.

"I have to keep working to support my horses," she said. "They eat me out of house and home. Of course, I'd like to get back to making better movies with people like Friedkin (Bill Friedkin who directed 'The Exorcist') and actors like Dustin Hoffman, Al Pacino and Jane Fonda.

"I'd done small parts in two pictures before 'The Exorcist.' The success of 'The Exorcist' really hit me in the back of the head. I was disappointed 'The Heretic' didn't do as well.

"Now I try to work in the best pictures that get offered to me.

"I really enjoyed doing 'Roller Boogie.' It's an old-fashioned picture like they used to make in the 40s and 50s. There are no bad words. No controversy. It's wholesome, fun, light entertainment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent feelings, responsibility, realization that no free lunch exists, not in business or love life. Determine to pay your way. If this you do, path is cleared, cooperation is gained and inner satisfaction results. You'll see!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good Moon aspect coincides now with broader horizons, special assignment—and love relationship. Aries, Libra natives figure prominently—and so does the number 9. One who is ambitious and dynamic becomes an ally.

In 1980, you make a new start, you will be more independent and love will play major part in scenario. August could be your most memorable month of the year. Persons born under Aries or Libra play important roles in your life. Recent confusion over communications will be clarified. A long-distance call will provide "missing link."

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

CONTRACT BRIDGE

by B. Jay Becker

'Twas the night before Christmas—
Two guests in our house
Had started to play bridge
With me and my spouse.

"Please tell me," she shouted,
"Why didn't you double?
'Twas plain from the start
That we had them in trouble."

"'Tis futile, my dear,"
Said I, taking no stand,
"To discuss it with you—
Let us play the next hand."

"Remember next time,"
Said she, icing a frown,
"To double a contract That's sure to go down."

So I picked up my cards
In a downtrodden state,
Then I opened One Spade
And awaited my fate.

East dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

	♠9 8 7 6
	♥6 5 4 3 2
	♦8 7 6 5
♠—		♠A K Q J 10
♥Q J 10 9		♥A K 8 7
♦K Q J 10 9		♦—
♣K Q J 10		♣A 9 8 7
	SOUTH
	♠5 4 3 2
	♦A 4 3 2
	♣6 5 4 3 2

The guy sitting South
Was like many I've known:
He played and he bid
In a world all his own.

"Two diamonds," he countered
With sort of
The ace in his hand
Gave him courage to spare.

My wife, she smiled faintly,
And tossing her head,
Leaned over the table:
"I double," she said.

And North, for some reason
I cannot determine,
Bid Two Hearts as though
He were preaching a sermon.

I grinned as I doubled,
Enjoying the fun,
And turned round to South
To see where he would run.

But South, undistressed,
Not at loss for a word,
Came forth with Two Spades—
Did I hear what I heard?

The other two passed
And in sheer disbelief
I said, "Double, my friend,
That'll bring you to grief."

South passed with a nod,
His composure serene;
My wife with a flourish
Led out the heart queen.

I sat there and chuckled
Inside o'er their fix—
But South very calmly
Ran off eight straight tricks!

He ruffed the first heart
In his hand right away,
And then trumped a club
On the very next play.

He crossruffed the hand
At a breathtaking pace,
Till I was left holding
Five spades to the ace.

In anguish my wife cried,
"Your mind's growing old!
Don't you see six notrump
In this hand is ice cold?"

By doubling this time
I'd committed a sin—
It just goes to prove
That you never can win.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"What's the time?" Vera asked. "I forgot to wind my watch."

Sam thought a moment. "You figure it out," he replied. "Half the time since noon today equals just one third of the time still to go before midnight."

So what was the time?

(Answer Thursday)

Friday's answer: Sons 60 and 67 years old.

Mr. Hunter answers all letters: ideas welcomed.

DINING SUITES Dine in style over the holidays by giving yourself a present that will last and increase in value as years go by. Rather than just spending money this Christmas invest it in one of our magnificent mahogany and walnut 8-10 piece dining suites from the turn of the century through the 1930's. Superbly crafted in solid wood, no pressed sawdust here. Our truck was in an accident on the way back from New York and Penn. so there is slight freight damage. Open 7 days, most nights, only 15 min. from town, Petes Place, 786 Goldstream, 478-6000. Financing avail. OAC.

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

You was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine all along the way

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us,
we cannot forget.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to thank all my neighbours, friends and relatives for their expressions of sympathy and acts of kindness at the passing of my husband, Percival Coatsworth Pike. — Mary Ellen Pike.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BENNETT - In loving memory of a dear Husband and Father, George P. Bennett, who passed away December 26th, 1970.
Nine sad and lonely years have passed
Since our great sorrow fell,
The shock that we received that day
No one will ever tell.
God gave us courage to meet it,
And strengh to bear the blow
Yet what it meant to lose you
No one will ever know.
You bade no one a last farewell or even said goodbye,
You were gone before we realized
And only God knows why.
Sadly missed and lovingly remembered always by his wife Betty and our dear family.

BLAKE — In loving memory of my son Joel.—Mom

CARLOW - Joseph Stephen, in loving memory of a husband, father and grandfather, passed away Dec. 26, 1978.
I seem to see in the soft, dim light
A face I loved the best.
And think of him when the sun's last ray
Goes down in the Far-off west.
I miss you no less as the time passes on
Than I did on the day of your going.
For absence can never close the door of my heart
And the lamp of my love is still glowing.
Your heart was the truest in all the wide world;
Your love the best to recall;
For no one on earth could take your place,
You are the dearest of all.
Your loving wife, daughters and grandchildren.

COLLINS — In memory of our beloved son and brother, Danny.
Your life is a beautiful memory
Your death a deepening grief.
We love and miss you so.
—Always in our thoughts, Mom and Dad, Jim, Lani, Andy, Elizabeth and John.

NEWCOMBE — In loving memory of our father, Clarence Newcombe, he is sadly missed by his family.

RENSHAW - In loving memory of our son and brother, Joey, taken from us, Dec. 23, 1970.
In our thoughts always.
Mom, Dad, Karie, Kathy and Korry.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

Pointers on caring for your gift plants gardening

hilda beastall

Much advice has been written in this column and others on the care of the many lovely plants raised commercially in greenhouses as Christmas potted plant gifts.

A condensation of important points may be helpful. The plant's care in the home should be similar to that given in the greenhouse during the last stage of its growth there.

The public in general confuses greenhouse and hothouse growing practices, believing that both have a closed atmosphere and high heat. This would spell disaster for the greenhouse operator who supplies retail outlets in supermarkets where customers choose their plants from open counters or stands near doors frequently opened. The plants are then carried unwrapped to cars parked out on the lot.

The high survival ratio of plants thus sold reflects back to the "finishing off" period the plants have received before delivery to the retail store. During that period, a greenhouse will have a somewhat lower temperature than in the average home and watering held to a minimum since the humidity is still higher than in homes.

It seems a good idea to ask for paper protection for the plant if you have a longer-than-usual distance to your car or if you are walking home or to the house of a friend who is to receive it as your gift.

Since the supermarket seldom has a trained florist as clerk for the plant sales, it might be wise to take extra wrapping of newspaper with you when weather is either windy or has a lower-than-mild temperature. Help in wrapping will, I am sure, be gladly given. After all, business depends on customer satisfaction with the product after it has been bought.

Cut flowers are a special pleasure at Christmas and the New Year. Freshly opened flowers and buds speak of the new season ahead.

You may already have cut flowers in the home. See that they are kept in a light but not sunny spot during the day. And that they are not in a draft of either hot air or cold air. Both will lessen their lifespan. At night put them in a slightly cooler place, such as on the floor near an outside door but still not in a draft.

The water level should be kept high in the container by topping off each day if the water is clean — not with ice water but water at room temperature.

The foliage of some cut flowers soon becomes slimy under water thus making it impossible for stem cells to take in the needed amounts for survival.

Chrysanthemum leaves and stock leaves are two well-known offenders and should be removed from the underwater portion of flower stems. Pieces of shrub foliage can be useful in making a green filler in their place.

Bunches of yellow marguerites are a favorite cut flower at Christmas for they have the color of sunshine and are long-lasting and inexpensive. Gradually cut the stems shorter each day until the flowers are in a low bowl with pieces of green conifer around them.

Have you ever wondered why flower arrangers, including florists, make use of low bowls to display cut flowers? As much as for looks, it is to have a wide surface of water exposed to the dry air and high temperature usually found in a home or other heated building.

In the dry heated air, moisture evaporates and rises around the flowers and foliage keeping them fresher than if wedged into a narrow-necked upright vase.

Knowing a few little details about your gift plants and flowers helps you to get full enjoyment from these beautiful products of the greenhouse industry.
